—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

SIR JAMES JEANS, great British astronomer, arrived yesterday with comforting information. He agrees with Einstein that "space is devouring matter," and looks on the universe as a giant bubble, that must burst sooner or later. BUT he is sure the explosion will not come for a million million years, not ONE million years, mind you, but a million times one million years, which reads as follows: 1,000,000,000,000 years.

That's a good many years, and men should be able to do something in that time, when you consider that we are only 12,000 years from the late stone age.

THE HUMBLE "fortuitous concourse of atoms" that writes this column respectfully declines to accept, even from Jeans and Einstein, the statement that "space is eating up matter."

If those gentlemen lived in the ocean, and observed closely, they might decide that "water was eating up fish," as they watched shoals of mackerel disappearing in the distance. But they would be mistaken.

Death eats up some of the fish, and fish swallow each other. But more fish come. And so with matter.

Jeans, in his magnificent, inspiring book, "The Universe Around Us," says our sun loses in weight 250,000,000 tons every minute. Consequently, it has lost 1,000 million tons of its weight within the last four minutes.

In the North Sea, the whale loses weight, as he swims about, but he swallows little creatures, and gets heavier. The sun may also "eat" on its journey, through space, and replenish its volume, weight, mass, bulk, or whatever you call it.

The power that started this universe going is probably great enough to keep it going.

FRED E. MURPHY, who publishes the Minneapolis Tribune and makes a big success of it, has been in New York listening to other publishers. Of the speech that Will Rogers made at the newspaper dinner on Thursday, Mr. Murphy said:

"It's the best speech Rogers ever made in his life."

Some newspapers didn't print much of it, perhaps Rogers said too much that was true.

MANY FARMERS that did not keep a cow or a chicken, now have two cows or more, and many chickens. You find hens' nests in the hayloft and under the barn, instead of finding a large pile of condensed milk cans back of the barn.

Mr. Murphy, who deserves credit for what he has done in Minneapolis, North Dakota, Montana and South Dakota, doesn't waste time merely "pitying the farmer." He works with him and for him.

PUBLISHERS HAVE discovered, or think they have discovered, that radio broadcasting offers serious, unfair competition in advertising.

Some newspapers say there is no more reason for papers to exploit radio than for radio to exploit the press, meaning by "exploit" to "give free advertising."

The question which must be settled by publishers is old. Baseball and racing get free advertising, enriching individuals that spend little or nothing for advertising.

And so-called "society persons," with no particular use to anything or anybody, fill pages with innumerable dull photographs of themselves. They pay newspapers nothing, although some of them do pay private press agents.

CAPT. HAWKS, who got his early training in the American Army and finished it for himself, seems to be the best airman now.

Having broken the air record from London to Rome, by cutting off more than half the flying time, he has now broken the record for commercial planes from Paris to London, making the 218 miles in 59 minutes.

THAT WOULD interest Napoleon, who sat patiently at the edge of the channel, wondering how he could get to England.

If there had been airplanes in Napoleon's day, he wouldn't have sat wondering. He would have gone to England.

HE WOULD have done for France, early in the last century, what modern France has done, building the biggest fighting air fleet in the world.

UP TO and including April 18, veterans had drawn on their bonus accounts $562,360,930, divided among 1,482,672 men. Three hundred fifteen thousand applications are still pending. This is money well used and now being well and quickly spent.

FIELD MARSHAL ALLENBY, one of the ablest fighters that Great Britain produced in the big war, celebrates his seventieth birthday with this statement:

"The next war will mean the complete end of civilization as we know it. Everything and everyone will be commandeered."

Even another World War could hardly kill civilization permanently. If it could be killed by anything, it would have been killed long ago, in the Hundred-Year War, and the Thirty-Year War, for instance.

BUT THE WORLD needs to be reminded that wars must become more and more deadly. And a really great war now

DIPLOMAT'S CHARGE PUT UP TO U. S.

Allegation He Got Medal for Attack on 'Non-Existent' Fort Stirs Marine Chief

BULLETIN.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Secretary Stimson said today the State Department would investigate the circumstances surrounding Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler's protest against statements attributed to Minister Bellegarde, of Haiti.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler's letter protesting statements attributed to Minister Bellegarde, of Haiti, has been forwarded by Secretary Adams to the State Department.

At the Navy Department it was said Butler's protest was sent to the State Department as a matter of departmental routine.

Assistant Secretary Jahncke, of the Navy, made this statement:

"A letter concerning statements attributed to the minister from Haiti has been received by the Secretary of the Navy from Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, United States Marine Corps.

SENT STATE DEPARTMENT

"Following the usual procedure in such cases, the letter has been forwarded by Secretary Adams to the Department of State."

Gen. Butler's protest followed publication of a newspaper item quoting the Haitian minister as saying the Marine officer got a Congressional Medal of Honor for leading an attack on a nonexistent fort. The article, published April 13, said Minister Bellegarde had returned to Washington after a trip to Haiti and "has pricked one of the myths about Gen. Butler, over whose veracity a controversy has raged which shook two continents."

'VERY IMAGINARY'

Bellegarde was quoted as saying:

"Monsieur Butler is very imaginary."

The interview said he read this as a statement from Butler:

"Some of the rebels escaped our dragnet and beat it across the river and gathered there in Fort Riviera, on top of the mountain. This fort was the last stand. It had been built by the French and had a fine fortification in its days. It never had been taken by an attacking force and nobody thought it could be taken. The old brick and stone building was 4,400 feet above sea level."

BATTLES NEAR IN NICARAGUA

PUERTO CABEZAS, Nicaragua, April 25.—(AP.)—Persistent reports of a union of two insurrectionist armies and their advance toward this little port city led to apprehension of an attack today.

The city had only a negligible number of National Guardsmen for its defense and although the U. S. S. Langley and two destroyers stood offshore no American naval forces have been landed.

Orders have been issued to the bluejackets, that if taken ashore, they are not to fire until attacked and are not to pursue attackers beyond the city limits.

COURT REOPENS ESTATE OF MRS. MOORE

Judge Finds Evidence of Fraud by Former Envoy in Handling Wife's Estate

Alexander P. Moore, one-time Pittsburgh newspaper publisher and later ambassador to Spain and Peru, fraudulently acquired and appropriated to his own use certain properties of his wife, the famed beauty, Lillian Russell Moore, Judge Thomas P. Trimble declared in Orphans Court today in handing down two orders withholding distribution of the Moore estate and reopening the estate of Lillian Russell.

Judge Trimble explained that the orders were to enable the Union Trust Company, executor of the Moore estate, to account for all properties belonging to Miss Russell which may be found in Moore's estate or elsewhere.

The evidence upon which Judge Trimble based his orders was brought out in the contest of Dorothy Russell Calvit, step-daughter of Moore, to break his will.

Mrs. Calvit contended that Moore, co-executor of his wife's estate, failed to account for numerous articles of jewelry and other valuable possessions which belonged to Miss Russell.

MAN SHOT, WIFE LINKED IN PLOT

NEW YORK, April 25.—(AP.)—Three days ago James DePew, 22, who operated an elevator in one hotel and lived well in another, was arrested as the man who had robbed and shot John T. Conlon, of Astoria, Queens.

Police said DePew had signed a statement alleging that he had committed the robbery at the suggestion of Mrs. Conlon so that she might have money to get a divorce. After that, according to DePew's statement, he and Mrs. Conlon planned to be married.

The husband, who is 41, operated a soft drink concession in Queens. His wife, who is 40, filed suit for separation a month ago, alleging cruelty in that he went fishing and left her at home. Conlon lost $63 and a diamond ring in the holdup.

Simple Rites Mark Infanta's Funeral

PARIS, April 25.—(INS.)—The strict simplicity that marked her life prevailed today at the funeral of the Infanta Isabella, Alfonso XIII's aunt.

King Alfonso, still in London, was represented at the services by his cousin, Don Alfonse of Orleans. Queen Victoria and all her children, as well as the Infanta Eulalia, sister of the Infanta Isabella, followed the cortege to Pere Lachaise Cemetery. There were only four automobiles in the funeral group. Persons close to the royal family stated that the coffin of the aged princess will rest only temporarily at Pere Lachaise before transfer to the royal burial vaults in Spain.

EXPERTS READY TO SCRUTINIZE CITY WORK

Engineers Aiming to Improve Contract System Will Launch Survey Monday

Seeking to determine whether improvements can be made in the Department of Public Works to save money for taxpayers, the committee of five engineers will begin Monday a private scrutiny of evidence regarding city contracts developed during the public phase of the quiz before City Council.

The engineers, it is understood, will look particularly into the methods employed in the department as to estimating quantities and the letting of city contracts.

The hearing closed late yesterday with John S. Herron, president of Council, first congratulating Henry Oliver Evans on the way he had conducted the investigation, and complimenting Director Edward G. Lang on the showing made by his department. Lang said the result of the quiz was a vindication for the department.

PARK TO SEEK BOOKS

Despite the decision of City Controller James P. Kerr not to make the books of the L. H. Parke Company a part of the dual audit of the Department of Supplies, District Attorney Andrew T. Park today indicated that he would continue his efforts to permit an examination of the records of the company in city transactions. He believes an audit can be obtained through moral suasion.

SEEKS TO QUIZ KLINE

Evans reminded Herron that there are still three things which he wishes to bring before Council. He said he desires to question Mayor Charles H. Kline. Evans has called for Kline at numerous

New York Quiz Appears to Be A Deadlock

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Anyway, a New York City Republican is like the old colored lady in the congregation that sinned and forgave. She bellowed:

"There's been nothing but sinning and forgiving in this congregation for 50 years, and all I've been doing is the forgiving."

Nobody can do much with Tammany. Even if the organization were to collapse like a house of cards, the boys would shuffle the cards and deal out a new hand all the way round.

So it looks as if the Republicans will have to do a little more forgiving, even if they can't forget. New York and Tammany are so closely jumped together that King Prajadhipok could inaugurate his American visit by giving them the Siamese twin blessing.

This investigation looks like a deadlock. The Republicans are fanning the fire to hasten the boiling, and Tammany is fanning the soup to cool it off.

Tammany claims it takes from the rich to give to the poor, which makes it either a round robin or a dyed canary.

And it doesn't mind an investigation provided it is in season.

HERRMANN, OLD BALL CZAR, DIES

CINCINNATI, O., April 25.—(AP.)—The unexpected death here today of August (Garry) Herrmann, former chairman of the extinct National Baseball Commission, marked the passing within a month of the third of baseball's once powerful forces, all of whom were from Ohio.

Herrman, also for years president of the Cincinnati National League baseball club, died at his home after a year's illness. He suffered a general breakdown in health and was 71 years old.

On last March 27, Ernest S. Barnard, late president of the American League and former president of the Cleveland Indians, died at Rochester, Minn., of a heart attack.

Less than one day later Byron Bancroft Johnson, iron-fist ruler of the American League for a quarter of a century, passed away at a St. Louis hospital after a long illness. Johnson was a native of Norwalk, O.

Herrmann was a former grand exalted ruler of Elks.

DUCE HALTS OUTBURST AIMED AT BELGIUM

Blocks March on Embassy; Brussels Drive Against 'Black Shirts' Assailed

ROME, April 25.—(AP.)—Premier Mussolini, appearing personally before a great crowd of students demonstrating at the Venezia Palace this noon, quieted their protests against anti-Fascist demonstrations in Brussels with a pledge of Fascist alertness against its enemies.

The students met first at the university to protest recent anti-Fascist demonstrations in Brussels. They plastered Rome with red and green posters urging a protest against the Belgian demonstrations, which were held in connection with the arrest of the Belgian, Prof. Leo Moulin, April 10, in Milan, which the authorities are alleged to have kept secret for a week.

CONFESSION ANNOUNCED

Italian authorities announced today that Prof. Moulin has confessed to anti-Fascist activity and that he will be held for trial before a special tribunal for defense of the state.

Il Duce, holding his hand aloft for silence, shouted to the crowd, which had moved en masse from the university to the palace, intending later to go to the Belgian embassy. He asserted:

"The Italy of the students is always on its toes to defend the revolutionary regime and Fascism against the stupid calumnies of anti-Fascists."

POLICE HALT PARADE

When Premier Mussolini had concluded his brief appearance before the mass of shouting humanity, most of them dispersed, but a number of groups with flags marched toward the Belgian embassy.

They were stopped by large squads of soldiers and police who were stationed at every corner within a quarter-mile radius of the embassy. They attempted a half-hearted demonstration at the bounds of the restricted area, but the troops broke it up, police arresting two student leaders.

Estelle's Attorney Leaves for Reno

LOS ANGELES, April 25.—(AP.)—Further preliminary sparring in the Estelle Taylor-Jack Dempsey divorce bout is scheduled for Reno, Nev., following the departure for Reno of Joseph Scott, attorney for the motion picture actress.

Scott said last night he intended to confer at Reno with the former heavyweight champion and his legal advisor, Robert Burns, on various phases of the proposed property settlement and the divorce actions which both principals threatened to bring.

'Tips' Fail to Lead To Kidnaped Doctor

ST. LOUIS, April 25.—(INS.)—Police today apparently were without a clue in the mysterious disappearance of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, wealthy clubman and throat specialist, who left his home five days ago on a purported fake call for professional service.

Police have run down every possible tip, report and theory since his reported kidnaping, but to no avail.

Woman Hunted as Slayer In Three Stranglings

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 25.—(INS.)—Theories were being developed by police and criminologists here today in an effort to solve the death of a child, a girl and a woman, all believed to have been strangled by the same killer this year.

The most startling was that a feminine fiend was the "phantom killer" responsible for the strange triumvirate of murders. The victims were:

Mrs. W. B. Bibbens, whose battered, slashed and garroted body was found Thursday night in her expensive apartment.

Louise Teuber, 17, whose unclad body was suspended from a tree last Sunday.

Virginia Brooks, school girl, who was kidnaped and murdered last February.

Coroner Gunn's autopsies reveal that each victim had died a the result of strangulation. H expressed the belief that th Brook girl had been choked t death; that Mrs. Bibbens wa garroted with a towel and tha the Teuber girl had been struc with a blunt instrument, then hanged with a rope.

Police point out that none of the victims was attacked in support of the theory that perhaps a crazed woman was behind the carnival of crime that has terrorized citizens here in the last three months.

Employes and officials at the City-County Building will report at 8:30 a. m. daylight saving and quit at 5 p. m. daylight time.

As required by state law, clocks at the City-County Building and at the Court House will remain on standard time, but employes will report and courts will convene an hour earlier, conforming to the daylight time schedule.

BIGGER PAYROLLS AND WORK FORCES BRIGHTEN OUTLOOK

WAGE RATES UPHELD BY INDUSTRY

U. S. Survey Shows Cuts in Only Few Cases While Business Generally Grows

WASHINGTON, April 25.—(AP.)—Larger payrolls to more men shone forth as a promise for the future today as reports to the Commerce Department indicated wage levels were being maintained.

Only "isolated cases" of pay reductions affecting 39,000 men in February were found by officials in statements reaching the Labor Department's bureau of labor statistics.

As an offset, labor officials said yesterday indications were that more men were being given full-time work. They cited an increase of $13,500,000 in the March aggregate weekly payroll of 13,000 plants, as compared with January, and 152,000 more persons receiving salaries.

SUPPORT LEVELS

A desire of employers to support existing levels was seen by Commerce Secretary Lamont. He said there was no movement to reduce wages, following a poll of the main industries.

Lamont declined to amplify his terse statement:

"I have canvassed the principal industries, and I find no movement to reduce the rates of wages.

"On the contrary, there is a desire to support the situation in every way."

The survey was made after discussion of possible salary cuts began some time ago.

HOOVER GRATIFIED

The White House announced recently President Hoover was gratified by an absence of wage reductions in major industries, which he opposed in a speech before the Cleveland convention of the American Bankers' Association a few months ago.

Industrial leaders promised the President at a conference in 1929 they would endeavor to maintain wages, and labor leaders pledged themselves to avoid strikes.

Chairman Woods, of the Emergency Employment Committee, said recently his group had found fewer wage reductions than in any other depression, adding:

"The big employers are not cutting wages, but some of the smaller ones are."

HOPE TO CURE MISSIONARY

CLEVELAND, April 25.—(AP.)—The Rev. Ralph Thurber, missionary to Korea, who is resigned to death from a tropical disease rarely found outside the Orient, has not been entirely given up by science.

Mr. Thurber has diagnosed his illness as distomiasis, probably contracted by eating improperly cooked fish in Korea, and predicted his death possibly within a month. However, from Dr. Ernest Carrol Faust, acting head of the tropical disease department at Tulane University, came word that there is hope for recovery if the liver has not been destroyed by the parasites.

The missionary, however, is certain that only faith can cure him. He offered himself to Johns Hopkins University for examination "for the benefit of thousands of poor sufferers who will come after me," but emphasized that he did not want to be a hero.

FUND SUIT LAID TO CHURCH ROW

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., April 25.—(AP.)—Miss Lida K. East said here yesterday the action filed against her in Pittsburgh to compel her to turn over $42,000 in cash and securities held by her as secretary-treasurer of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Protestant Church is the result of an old fight in the church.

She said the organization operates under a charter granted in 1880 and despite the fact that the men's organization of the church at the general conference in 1928 decided to take over the women's board, a referendum vote of the society was two to one against the action. The executive committee and her attorneys advised her to retain the funds, she said. The funds are held in trust in a Pittsburgh bank. She had been advised by her attorneys of the contemplated action and the matter was entirely in their hands, she said.

BEVERAGE FIRM RAIDED BY DRYS

Ten barrels and three kegs of allegedly high-test beer were reported seized in the racking room of the Mt. Pleasant Beverage Company, of Mt. Pleasant, whose permit to manufacture cereal beverages was ordered restored by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson April 2.

Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington issued a revocation order in March, 1930, which Judge Gibson held was unsupported by the evidence.

An inspector of the State Alcohol Board and a state policeman visited the plant yesterday and found the beer in the racking room, they declared. They summoned prohibition agents from Pittsburgh. Pennington, in Pittsburgh today on an inspection trip, was expected to take some action in the case.

SHORT LINE BUS TRIPS PLANNED

Through service between Pittsburgh and Butler by way of Mars and Evans City will be in effect over the Harmony Short Line Motor Transportation route early next week, according to the announcement of W. R. Glick, secretary and treasurer of the company, today. Buses now run only to Mars.

Buses will probably leave Pittsburgh and Butler every two hours, Glick says. Service is expected to commence every day in Mars at 5 a. m., the first bus running to Butler and leaving Butler at 6 a. m., to arrive in Pittsburgh by 8 a. m. The last bus will leave Pittsburgh at 1 a. m., according to tentative arrangements.

NAUTILUS RADIO PICKED UP IN CALIFORNIA

Coast Station Establishes Communication With Polar Submarine at Yonkers

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25.—Direct wireless communication between the submarine Nautilus, on which Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins will journey to the North Pole, and the San Francisco Examiner, was established for the first time last night.

At 9 p. m. the Examiner's short wave station, KUP, heard the first signal from the Nautilus, now undergoing final tests at Yonkers, and three minutes later R. G. Martin, manager of KUP, was having a dot-and-dash conversation with Operator Ray Meyer on the other edge of the United States. Meyer said:

"We hope to start for New York the first week in May. After that we cross the Atlantic to London, thence to Oslo, Bergen and Spitzbergen, and finally across the floor of the Arctic Ocean to the North Pole.

"Our route will then take us across the top of the globe to Cape Bloom, Alaska, and we ought to be in San Francisco by Thanksgiving."

Three experienced radio men in addition to Meyer are members of the Nautilus crew. They will attempt voice broadcasts as soon as the trip across the Atlantic begins, Meyer told Martin. They hope to be able to talk to the world late this summer from a wireless transmitter set up on the ice near the Pole.

YONKERS, N. Y., April 25.—Whether Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine Nautilus meets disaster under the Arctic ice packs or emerges triumphantly after a 42-day voyage past the North Pole will depend to a great extent on her engine room.

Here presides Chief Engineer Ralph D. Shaw over two four-cycle, six-cylinder, 500-horsepower Diesel engines that gain their propulsive power from a high-gravity fuel oil.

Under full power the engines use about 44 gallons of fuel oil an hour and about three gallons of lubricating oil. Because of their economy of fuel the Diesels are greatly superior to other engines for use in submarines.

tions to ask him concerning his methods in making appointments.

Evans also asked that he be given an opportunity to discuss garbage and rubbish disposal and bridge repainting.

Herron, while not answering directly on Evans' three requests, intimated Evans will be welcome to come before Council at any time and to present matters of public interest.

The committee who will pass on the evidence brought out by the probe dealing with contract methods consists of A. G. Butler, of the Bylesby Engineering and Management Corporation, and J. N. Chester, C. S. Davis, E. K. Morse and S. A. Taylor, consulting engineers.

'RACKET' TALK DENIED

A contradiction between witnesses was seen in the final session when P. J. Ridge, a contractor, said that George P. Barnes, a city inspector, had told him that the method of bidding on city contracts was a "racket" and that quantities called for in the estimate need not be actually placed.

Barnes denied he told Ridge anything of the kind.

CHARGE RULED OUT

An accusation by Evans that books and records had been burned on the Chislett street dump of the M. O'Herron Company, last Sunday failed to stand. Evans explained that a woman in the neighborhood had seen papers being burned there, but had declined to testify. It was ordered stricken from the record.

Evans in his closing argument declared that city employes should be above suspicion and that private dealings between inspectors and contractors should be discouraged. He said it was bad for employes and everyone concerned, and leads to unjust suspicions.

5 POLICEMEN WAIVE HEARING

Five Homestead policemen, including Night Capt. John 'Cup' Jenkins, and Fire Chief Herman Samuels waived hearing on charges of aggravated assault and battery when arraigned before Alderman George J. Anderson yesterday. They were held for court under $1,000 bond each.

The men are accused by John Gaydes, a carpenter, of 532 City Farm lane, Homestead, of coming into his house without a warrant for his arrest, attacking and beating him and taking him to jail.

Attorney Louis Little, marshalling the six defendants in front of the alderman, said:

"We've decided we want a jury to tell the people of Homestead that their officers were justified. It is with great pleasure that we waive hearing for court."

No testimony was taken in the case and the Homestead officers did not reveal why they arrested Gaydes, who is now out on bond in two cases—one of assault and battery upon a Homestead policeman and the other of perjury in connection with the trial of a Homestead gambler. The defendants in addition to Jenkins and Samuels are Patrolman Albert Kozer, George Pachuta, George Palmer and James Summers.

RICHARDSON TO TALK ON UTILITIES

Power Publicity Man Offers To Face House Quiz on Textbooks, Denies Evasion

WASHINGTON, April 25.—(AP.)—Notice that he was ready and willing to testify before the Pennsylvania Legislature's committee investigating public utilities, was sent by J. S. S. Richardson, utility publicity agent, to the committee.

To correct what he said was "a misunderstanding" on the part of the House of Representatives committee, Richardson, who was sought for questioning relative to alleged propaganda activities, dispatched the following telegram to Harold Evans, counsel of the committee:

"I am prepared to appear before the Pennsylvania House Public Utilities Committee at any time that is mutually convenient. Suggest after Tuesday, next week."

DENIES EVASION

Richardson, now connected with the joint committee of National Utilities Associations, denied he had evaded service of a subpena at Harrisburg several weeks ago and came to Washington to be out of the jurisdiction of the committee.

Richardson was said at Harrisburg by Chairman Moore, of the House committee, to be wanted as a witness for questioning in connection with alleged activities of public utilities in the last gubernatorial campaign in the state as well as circumstances of an effort of several years ago charged against utilities of seeking inclusion of matter favorable to electric companies in public school textbooks.

Coolidge Lauds Foreign News Coverage in U. S.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., April 26.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

One of the developments stimulated by the World War is the increased attention given by our press to foreign news. Like most things in journalism, it is partly a creation of the newspapers and partly a response to a public demand. No doubt now can exist as to the demand or as to the efficiency with which it is supplied.

Mr. Coolidge

The result that is so generally commendable is the accuracy and fairness of our principal news reports of the whole field of foreign affairs. To anyone who has a knowledge of what is printed about us abroad and who has independent sources of information concerning the daily occurrences in distant countries, the superiority of our newspapers to those abroad in securing and printing important foreign news is very striking.

We are building up a body of correctly informed public opinion concerning other countries that is more in accord with the facts than their estimation of us. From the condition of strangers to be held in suspicion the rest of the world is being transformed into neighbors with whose aspirations we can sympathize and whose success we can applaud. Good will and peace are being strengthened by this better understanding.

$50,000 FARO GAME SWINDLER SUSPECT SLAIN

Spain to Hear Zamora Radio Talk Via U. S. Stations

KDKA TO AID IN RELAYING SPEECH

Address Arranged by Hearst Service to Go Back Over Sea for Homeland to Hear

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The new Spanish provisional president, Alcala Zamora, will be heard tomorrow in the first international broadcast ever made from Spain, and the first public expression of its new president since he took office. People in all parts of the world, including many in Spain, will hear the broadcast by way of the United States.

Long-wave broadcasting over short distances is at a comparatively low stage of development in Spain. But many persons have short-wave sets and are accustomed to listening in on long-distance programs from Great Britain and other European countries.

WILL CROSS SEA AGAIN

As the program arranged by Hearst Newspapers Radio Service and National Broadcasting Company is picked up in the United States Sunday and tells the story of the causes and effects of the Spanish revolution, Zamora's words will be "short-circuited" so that they may be heard in his own country. As the program is picked up in the United States it will be rebroadcast across the Atlantic by short wave and simultaneously carried on the combined nationwide networks of NBC. The rebroadcasting of the program on short wave will also enable it to be heard in Central and South America.

Cables from Madrid state that the President will speak directly from his office. He will be presented to the worldwide audience by George Wheeler Hinman, Jr., correspondent of Universal Service and the Hearst Radio Service, who will follow him and translate his remarks into English. Irwin B. Laughlin, United States ambassador to Spain, has been invited to participate in the program, which will go on the air Sunday at 1 p. m. eastern daylight time.

HISTORIC EVENT

The rebroadcasting across the Atlantic and to the other Spanish-speaking countries will be done through the short-wave stations of KDKA, Pittsburgh, and WGY, Schenectady.

The President's broadcast will represent the first direct statement of his views since he overthrew Alfonso XIII and the Bourbon regime last week, and is awaited as an international expression of historical importance. It will be the first time in history that a president has delivered what is in a sense an inaugural address to his own people by way of another country.

Spanish Broadcast Plans Laid by KDKA

People in all parts of the world will be able to hear the address of Provisional President Alcala Zamora, of the new republic of Spain, Sunday at 1 p. m. daylight saving time, through arrangements made by Hearst Radio Service to have the entire proceedings rebroadcast by W8XK, short wave station of KDKA. Two wave lengths will be used by W8XK, one of 19.7 meters and the other 25.4 meters. The address will not be on the KDKA standard wave, but it will be on the standard wave of WCAE.

The president's address and the Engish interpretation will take about 15 minutes, after which efforts will be made to have a Spanish band play the new national anthem of the republic and other symbolic compositions.

TWO EX-PALS HUNTED IN KILLING

'Double-Cross' Believed Motive; Victim Shot as He Puts Car in Garage

International News Service.

CHICAGO, April 25.—Chicago detectives hurried to South Bend, Ind., today, following the fatal shooting of a man said by his wife to have been the chief "con" man in the Edward Litsinger-Myrtle Tanner Blacklidge $50,000 faro swindle.

George Parker, alias George L. Perry, was shot to death last night in the Indiana city, as he stepped out of his father-in-law's garage after parking his car.

Chicago authorities brought with them descriptions of "Parker's" associates in the Blacklidge-Litsinger swindle, who were named as Roy Burgess and Roscoe Reynolds.

That a "double-cross" was the motive for the killing of Parker was the conviction of police after statements made by the slain man's widow.

ASSOCIATES SOUGHT

Burgess and Reynolds are now sought as Parker's assassins.

Mrs. Perry, or Parker, disclosed she and her husband had gone to France after the faro swindle sailing February 10. She admitted, according to police, that the flight was because of his participation in what she termed the Blacklidge case.

Perry lived and was conscious for a half hour after he was shot in the back of the head. But he would not talk. He told those who sought to learn the slayer's identity:

"It's none of your business."

But to a nurse, he muttered with his last breath:

"He was a friend of mine."

RETURNED FROM FRANCE

Mrs. Parker stated she and Parker had stayed in Nice until last month. The death of Perry's mother brought her home.

Since the funeral, Perry has remained in hiding at the home of his father-in-law.

Perry and his wife had been motoring last night. They went back to the Canniff home shortly before midnight. Mrs. Perry, Parker, left the machine after it had been driven in the garage.

Her husband left the garage by a side door and, while he was moving to join his wife, the slayer came.

PLAN MEDICAL AID FOR MINERS

The Helping Hand Society came to the rescue of the families of more than 100 miners, destitute in two squalid camps adjoining the J. W. Stephenson mine at Penowa, 20 miles from Washington.

A truck filled with food and clothing will be taken to the camps this morning, Harry I. Miller of the Helping Hand said, and distributed among the families.

Later in the day Dr. C. B. Schildecker, chief of staff at West Penn Hospital, is expected to go to Penowa soon to organize a first-aid station, which will be maintained by the Helping Hand, for treatment of the undernourished people. Particular attention will be paid the 200 children.

The first-aid hospital will be set up in the abandoned station of the P. & W. Va. Railroad at Penowa.

Miller said that Dr. A. R. Wise, who has supervised much of the dental work at the Helping Hand Home in Water street, also was to go to Penowa and arrange for installation of a clinic there.

Miller said that investigation showed 70 per cent of the children were in need of immediate dental work.

JOE E. BROWN SUES CIRCUS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25.—(AP.)—Joe E. Brown, film comedian, has filed a $100,000 damage suit here against the Al G. Barnes Wild Animal Show and the Al G. Barnes Amusement Company, alleging the circus used a likeness of his face in its advertising matter.

Brown was granted a temporary injunction yesterday.

The suit stated Brown was featured in a film made by Warner Brothers at winter quarters of the Barnes circus and that afterward the circus used copies of Brown's picture for publicity.

Brown contended his livelihood was derived from his facial contortions and the circus damaged his income to the extent of $100,000.

FEALTY SWORN BY BERENGUER

MADRID, April 25.—(Universal.)—Gen. Damaso Berenguer, former dictator-premier and once staunch friend of ex-King Alfonso, has signed a pledge to take up arms in defense of the republic, if necessary.

The pledge also binds him to obey all dictates of the new Republican government. His brother, Gen. Frederico Berenguer, also signed.

The former premier is reported to have confessed to friends that while he remains "at heart" a monarchist, he feels obliged "to obey a government imposed by the will of the people."

This report has precipitated a storm of criticism against the government's acceptance of Berenguer's fealty. They warn that cooperation with monarchists is "dangerous" to the liberty of Spain, regardless of promises.

Man Frees Brother By Confessing Slaying

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—(AP.)—Harry Leonetti, 21, paid a debt of gratitude yesterday that sent him to prison for the rest of his life.

He paid it to his brother, Christopher, 30, who went to jail for a crime Harry committed. Christopher, who was convicted on circumstantial evidence of murder in the second degree for the slaying of Dominick di Guglielmo last September and sentenced to nine to 18 years, "took the rap" in silence.

Harry appeared before Judge Eugene V. Alessandroni in the same court where Christopher was convicted, and said:

"I did it, your honor. My brother is innocent. I killed Di Guglielmo during a fight at our home. He attacked me."

Goddard said he tossed one of the sacks of mail into one corner of the car some feet away from him. As it landed there was a loud explosion and soon all that section of the car was aflame.

The oil painting was not taken, however. Because of its size, the murderer was forced to leave without it.

Dr. Saburgi, whose murder occurred yesterday in his hotel room, had designed the painting after 36 years of study. It contained 666 separate pictures and was painted under his direction by eight prominent artists. The basic principles of every religion are represented in the work.

BISHOPS TO AID JUBILEE RITES

The Golden Anniversary Jubilee of the Knights of St. George will be held in St. Paul's Cathedral tomorrow.

Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of Pittsburgh, will say the jubilee vespers, and Bishop John J. Swint, of Wheeling, will preach the sermon.

ROLL CALL DAY ARRANGED BY LUTHERANS

Volunteer Mission Workers To Be Enrolled Sunday; Special Service Planned

Roll Call Day, of the Lutheran Inner Mission Society, will be held tomorrow, with special services in Lutheran churches throughout the Pittsburgh area. The Rev. C. S. Michelfelder, superintendent of the society, and the Rev. A. W. Stremel, institutional pastor, have announced that more than 2,500 volunteer workers will be commissioned at the services tomorrow morning for the visitation of those interested in the Inner Mission.

A special commissioning service will be observed in all churches of that denomination, with sermons on appropriate Inner Mission topics.

The 1931 Inner Mission slogan, "Share With Him," will be employed by all pastors. The society has announced that since the first of November, it has cared for an additional 1,000 families, the food budget alone having been $50,000.

During part of the time, it was announced, the staff has carried a large number of volunteer workers in addition to the usual staff of secretaries and visitors.

CHURCH DAMAGE TO BE VIEWED

Claiming the St. Theresa Catholic Church property in Perrysville has been damaged $41,711 by relocation of the Perry highway, which took a large strip off the front of the lot, the Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Diocese of Pittsburgh, petitioned Quarter Sessions Court to appoint viewers to assess damages. He said the church officers and County Commissioners had been unable to agree on compensation.

Judge George V. Moore appointed C. M. Shoaf, W. M. McJunkin and E. E. Phillips as the board of viewers.

It is claimed the church lost the sidewalk and several shade trees, and that the highway line is so close it will be necessary to move the rectory. It is also declared the property is no longer suitable for a new school, which had been planned, and that the church will be put to additional expense in changing the school plans.

COLORS ARE IMPORTANT IN THE NEW SARTORIAL SCHEME

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, April 25. — One does not have to journey to Italy or Spain for colorful street scenes. Not while we are indulging a love for color — perhaps long suppressed — in the form of brightly hued street clothes. One finds it difficult to recall a period when color has played such a vital part in the sartorial scheme. Every woman has become a color expert, blending, matching and contrasting with academic skill and a fine sense of what really does become her. For with the wealth of shades and tones available and permissible this season, it would be the simplest thing in the world to run riot and set forth looking like a jumbled rainbow. Most of us are steering somewhat clear of contrasts and take our color neat or with just a dash of white. Reds, blues and greens in the form of frocks and suits are very well liked here and are seen everywhere. Dark brown with beige is another favorite and is much used for suits. When navy is used it is generally relieved by a touch of white or else of a lighter shade of blue on red, while black uses the same methods to achieve the brightness that the season demands.

* * *

BOTH OF THE figures combined in today's drawing are wearing colorful clothes. The frock is by Lucile, who has made it of red wool in a lightweight quality. White, in the form of a pique gilet, is introduced beneath the bolero. The narrow cuffs, too, are of the pique. Inverted box-pleats give the necessary walking width to the skirt. The other drawing is of a suit by Jane Regny, for afternoon wear. It is of green triple crepe with the collar and edges of the jacket bordered with a slightly fulled-on double band of the material, a most attractive note of ornamentation.

* * *

216 Women Represent 34 Clubs at Meeting of County Federation

County work seems to be one of the fastest growing movements in the club world. Take the Allegheny County Federation meeting yesterday, for example. Thirty-four clubs were represented and, at a time when every housewife's fancy is supposd to turn to thoughts of spring cleaning, 216 of them (more than attended the district meeting last month) were present. Three clubs, the Sarah Sloan Scholarship, the Plum Creek Woman's Club and the 38-year-old Oakmont Woman's Club have become affiliated since the last meeting. The Tarentum Book Club, by the way, won the silver basket for attendance yesterday.

Mrs. H. J. Fox was most gracious in her new executive duties and kept the meeting to the clock. The women met in the Aspinwall Woman's Club home, the hostess president, Mrs. I. H. Milliken, making the welcoming address. Besides the usual reports, the morning session included an informative address on "Equal and Unequal Legal Rights of Men and Women," by Attorney S. M. Hazlett, of Tarentum.

Luncheon was prepared and served by the justly-famed Aspinwall Club cooks. Then in the afternoon came a group of songs by Mrs. George Roble, with Miss Betty Beatty accompanying, and Mrs. Maud Topping playing violin obligatos. Next came two very amusing playlets, "It Happens Every Day" and "A Change of Mind," in which Mrs. J. J. Frey, Mrs. Charles Gamble, Mrs. E. W. Duckwall, Mrs. C. V. Keil and Mrs. Harry Marsh maintained the standards of the Aspinwall drama department.

To complete the program there was a talk on "The Bible in Shakespeare" by the Rev. A. F. Walker. While Shakespeare rarely quotes the Bible, he is more greatly indebted to it (in the number of allusions he makes) than is any other author except John Bunyan, Mr. Walker stated as he went on to mention many of these allusions as well as the Biblical names Shakespeare uses. "The Taming of the Shrew," the speaker observed, is the only play in which the great author makes no allusion to the Book of Books.

The fall meeting will be in Carnegie with the Woman's Club as hostess.

One of the largest audiences that has ever witnessed a Congress of Clubs kirmess went to Carnegie Music Hall last night to see what proved to be quite the best performance the school of physical education has ever staged. There were 65 numbers, and of these it would be difficult to say which was the most popular.

The program opened with a waltz dedicated to the Congress president, Mrs. Ralph W. Johnston, which was done by six, of the advanced students and the instructors, Miss Helen Bennett, Karl Heinrich and Bert Layton.

The costuming was especially colorful and original, that of the black and white scene attracting unusual comment. Of the dancers, Burnette Thomas, Marjorie Jones and Henrietta Hacker did outstanding work in several numbers, and Myrtle Altwater afforded a gasp or two when she danced with a real snake. Little Charles Kallman, who sang a French song, and his companions of the very little folks class, made a big hit in the French doll number. "Six Streaks of Syncopep" and the Grecian Ballet were other numbers that added prestige to the deserved reputation of the physical education school.

NEWS ADS HELD AID TO CHURCH

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—(AP.)—Walter Irving Clarke, national publicity director for the Presbyterian Church, announced that the annual report of his department, to be presented to the Presbyterian General Assembly at Pittsburgh, May 28-June 3, would urge paid newspaper advertising for organized Christianity and for local churches.

The report will advise, Clarke said, that newspapers are to be given credit for increased attention to religious news, and that space given to church news in the secular press has steadily increased with the growth of the department.

The report continues that similarly, larger and more intelligent attention is being given to the cultivation of paid church advertising in the daily press. The General Assembly of 1919 recommended to all Presbyterian churches throughout the United States that they engage in paid advertising as one aid in advancing the cause of Christ in the world.

REVIEWS OF NEW PICTURES; HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM TALK

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

A tiny band of giggling girls with buckets and brooms tried to scrub the sidewalks of East Liberty not long ago. They wore funny stockings, grotesque coiffures, wouldn't talk to people. Folks thought they were crazy but they were neophytes.

Ah, yes, this is the season on yonder campus for the blossoming of the neophyte. When he or she blooms, he or she is then a full-fledged member of some fraternity or sorority. A neophyte if you insist, is the piece de resistance of a fraternity initiation and the early springtime is one of the seasons at Pitt, Tech and Duquesne.

* * *

Technically, a "neophyte" is only a "pledge" until a week or so before initiation and his lot, by comparison, is easy. Then he must move into his fraternity house for a matter of a week or two so that his brothers-in-arms-to-be can see his smiling face from morning 'till night—and all night, too, if they wish.

He is treated handsomely, royally, because he is allowed to eat and is given a bed to sleep. But, of course, he has his carefully assigned duties. Everyone has duties.

* * *

The neophyte does all the work around a fraternity house, runs countless errands, operates phonographs for endless hours, announces at the door in loud tones when he comes and goes.

Neophytes are practitioners of the royal angle. The command is "Assume the royal angle!" It is most convincing when a 200-pounder says it. More convincing if he leers. To assume the royal angle, one clasps securely his ankles. Try it. One always shuts one's eyes and sometimes one offers a silent prayer. One is allowed, fairly enough, to put one's head against a bed or a pillow held against a wall if one insists.

* * *

Other duties of a neophyte, with thousands omitted because you have as good an imagination as a college boy, are:

To carry an egg in one's hip pocket for a week or two without turning one's back to anyone (one's own idea) without getting caught with it in a handkerchief.

To memorize and recite poems, to memorize the Greek chapter names and names of schools where are located all other chapters of one's fraternity, to memorize the Greek alphabet, to memorize the names of all Greek fraternities and sororities . . .

To eat all one's meals for two weeks without silverware, to eat while on one's knees, to utter not one word for days at a time . . .

To go at midnight to Homewood Cemetery and get the dates of birth and death from John Smith's tombstone (There often ain't no John Smith, see?)—

To go to Highland Park in the early hours and count the pickets in the reservoir fence . . .

To barter one's way into a theater with three pennies, eight pants buttons, a shoe buttoner, three beer checks and a week-old trolley transfer . . .

To scrub all light poles in downtown Fifth avenue with a tooth brush and a bucket of water . . .

To catch a black cat, take him to the fraternity house and then with nine other pledges catch 10 black cats in a black cellar (it's fun!) . . .

To find one's way back to the fraternity house when one in the middle of the night is penniless and dumped out of a car miles from somewhere . . .

* * *

Don't overlook "Hell Night," which is the worst night of "Hell Week," which may be two weeks long. "Hell Night" is the one night when everyone retires to the cellar, specially fixed up for the occasion. The neophytes are the guests, the goats, the entertainers. Some neophytes carry bruises for weeks after the nightmare, which involves for them, usually nude and blindfolded, endless series of thrills, frights and, of course, a share of thwacking. Thwacking with funny things called paddles, four or five of which are bought from a lumber yard by each neophyte. Convenient handles are tooled for the members.

Then the big night is a solemn one in which the neophytes and brothers wear ancient robes, burn incense, use strange instruments of an olden day, swear strange oaths of burning, undying allegiance. Then brothers all everybody shakes hands with everybody else, mayhap goes out for a joyous party.

Some Actresses Favor, Others Oppose New Long Hair Mode

By HARRISON CARROLL

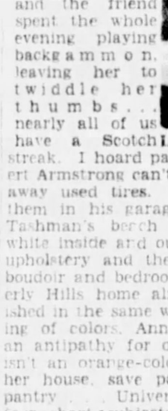
(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, April 25.

Feminine stars are not succumbing easily to the new mode of long hair.

So far as I can discover, Loretta Young, Betty Compson and Lois Wilson are the only three cinema beauties who are definitely committed to growing full length tresses. Of course, a number of feminine stars never yielded to the scissors. At Universal, Genevive Tobin, Rose Hobart and Sydney Foxe all have long hair. Ann Harding, Dolores Costello, Barbara Stanwyck, Eleanor Boardman are others who have held out for the old mode.

A good many feminine players are compromising upon a shoulder length. This is convenient, because it allows a coiffure of either style. It also makes the wearing of wigs much more comfortable. Norma Shearer, Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, Constance Bennett, Helen Twelvetrees, Lilyan Tashman all follow this style.



Norma Shearer

Among the prominent stars who have no intent of changing their bobs are Mary Pickford, Ina Claire, Norma Talmadge, Dorothy Mackaill and Leila Hyams. Wynne Gibson even plans to discard her long tresses for a bob.

Approaching summer will exert a strong influence. The film folk are nearly all beach devotees, and many of them aren't afraid to go into the water. Like other girls, they don't like to waste time drying long hair.

It will be interesting to see how the fashion fares.

LATEST GOSSIP

Harpo Marx is Hollywood's bad boy. Recently he invited a feminine magazine writer to dinner. After it was over, he asked her if she didn't want to go with him to a friend's house. She did, and when they got there, Harpo and the friend spent the whole evening playing backgammon, leaving her to twiddle her thumbs . . . nearly all of us have a Scotch streak. I hoard paper clips, Robert Armstrong can't bear to throw away used tires. He has 30 of them in his garage . . . Lilyan Tashman's bench home will be white inside and out, even to the upholstery and the drapes. Her boudoir and bedroom in her Beverly Hills home already are finished in the same way . . . Speaking of colors, Ann Harding has an antipathy for orange. There isn't an orange-colored article in her house, save possibly in the pantry . . . Universal will make four short subjects at Stanford University, in addition to its Notre Dame series. "Pop" Warner, famous coach, will supervise. An attempt will be made to have Ernie Nevers and Jim Thorpe play in one of the series. They are two outstanding players, who have been developed by "Pop." Thorpe, of course, was in the Carlyle Indian days . . . Having gained back the 10 pounds he lost in an attack of influenza in New York, Robert Montgomery is planning to ride in Hoot Gibson's rodeo Sunday. He and Reginald Denny have white chaps and saddles for the occasion.

WESLEY EDDY IS BACK AND 'FRONT PAGE' MAKES A HIT

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Cohorts of enthusiastic admirers greeted Wesley Eddy in the Penn yesterday, as he conducted the orchestra "On the Road to Mandalay" and sang several songs with his old verve and feeling. There is no place for a master of ceremonies in the stage show—so Wesley has a little concert of his own.

George Seibel

That stage show, by the way, doesn't need a master of ceremonies. It runs itself—and is the best the Penn has ever had. There's an acrobatic act, with a background of a Greek temple pediment, that is as amazing as it is beautiful. There are three comical dancers whose flipflops, falls and entanglements are as marvelous as mirthful. There is a chocolate hoofer who taps a wicked pair of feet. And that jewel-case full of Chester Hale Girls, after their cat-and-mouse ballet, is rich in color and rhythm.

MENJOU TURNS EDITOR

The picture play is that classic of journalism as the dwellers in Main Street think it flourishes in Chicago—"The Front Page"—with Adolphe Menjou as the master mind who holds his star reporter by fair means or foul.

Being told in advance that the scene is laid in a mythical kingdom, it is only necessary to remember that "mythical" all things do not exist. That takes all the libel out of the picture. All those newspaper men, reporters and editors, are cutthroats, thieves, liars, bums and lunatics, but their antics make a capital story. And every one is played to perfection. The picture is cast even better than the play, and moves even faster.

GAGS FOR PROFANITY

The censor has clapped his gag upon the wildest explosions of profanity, probably because he has been told that newspaper men in mythical kingdoms never swear. The rest of the picture follows the play very closely, but at high speed that soon overtakes it. It is thrilling, amusing, well played and everything else a picture should be. For a mythical kingdom it may even be scrupulously true to life.

Altogether this is the best stage show and the best screen feature the Penn Theater has ever brought together in the same bill.

Washington Divided Over New Time Plan

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 25.—The time problem for the city of Washington remained unsettled with indications that a confused condition will result with the institution of daylight saving time next week. The Washington Ministerial Association has voted to remain on standard time, and the City School Board will also keep the schools on the standard time basis. Numerous offices and Washington and Jefferson College will operate on the daylight saving plan.

Man's Injuries Fatal, Suspect Faces Jury

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., April 25.—Frank Brown, 35, Daisytown, succumbed here yesterday to injuries sustained March 1 when struck over the head with a beer bottle, William Tripelett, 24, his alleged assailant, was to face a Washington County coroner's jury today.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

NEW YORK, April 25.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Big brokerage firm failed here and that throws 'em into another scare. You know, funny thing but the rest of the country is all feeling pretty good, but here in New York they are doing more beefing than all the rest of the country put together. I don't believe New York has got the nerve to stand it like lots of folks. All over the country they can be hurting and wont let out a squawk, but this place's nerves are more jumpy. But it's a great old town, and I never in my life saw as many new high buildings, but everything is the "market" with 'em here.

Will Rogers

Yours, WILL.

Girl of West

Mary Brian is the heroine in "Gun Smoke," a picture of city gangsters and the Wild West, current in the Fulton and Sheridan Square.

FUN FEST IN ALDINE FEATURES DENNY AND GREENWOOD

By ROBERT MATTHEWS

Brimful of comedy is "Stepping Out," which opened in Loew's Aldine yesterday. It could hardly be otherwise with Charlotte Greenwood in one of the foremost roles, along with Reginald Denny, Leila Hyams, Cliff Edwards and Lillian Bond. The story is the age-old one of playing husbands caught in the midst of their fun by unexpectedly returning wives. But the situations are new, original and novel and the dialogue teems with mirth-provoking phrases that emphasize the humor of cleverly created scenes in which the production abounds.

HUSBANDS SURPRISED

The story is laid in Hollywood, where the two husbands "stepping out" are surprised in the midst of a swimming party, in which two actresses are their companions. They try, in vain, to explain that it is a business conference in which they are negotiating with these two stars to play in the picture they are producing and the situation drifts rapidly towards possible divorce, when their lawyer explains to the two remorseful men that if they can spend a night in their homes with their wives, grounds for divorce will vanish and all will be well.

They do. And how makes mirth in plenty.

MERRIMENT PLENTIFUL

A "Mexican mouse" subterfuge, used by the one husband, is most cleverly handled and affords much merriment to the audience, while Charlotte Greenwood and her penitent spouse, in a bathroom scene, register heavily as mirth provokers.

In addition to the feature presentation, the ever popular "Mickey Mouse," "Hungarian Rhapsody" and "The Rounder," a breezy comedy, together with Hearst's Metrotone News complete the bill of entertainment. In the latter, among the subjects presented are photos of the King and Queen of Siam, as well as a number of other interesting news pictures.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Since an Englishman wrote on "On The Spot," racketeer meller coming Monday to the Alvin one, naturally would expect him to have the title "At The Place," but, no, he would be perverse and get the proper gangster argot. In it will be a twosome of movie dames, Anna May Wong and Glenda Farrell, not heretofore seen here on the stage. Miss Anna is a Chinese flapper, native of Los.

Those petite dancing gals are such slow thinkers that many of them reach their thirtieth birthday before they think they're 20 years old.

* * *

Robert Fiske will play the role of Charley Marsden—"dear old Charley"—when George Sharp presents Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" in the Pitt next week. Paul McGrath, as the Doctor, will exchange glares with Bob. Personally, I think Bob is so much the more expert glarer, that he ought to be handicapped a glare or two in order to make the betting even. But you never can tell—p'raps Paul has been practicing and taking some glaring error as a model.

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: I think you ought to say something about the rumors concerning a possible merger of the Post and the Sun. Not a few of the Post employes have been calling up to inquire and they seem worried about their jobs . . . The Sun, it appears, won't dignify the rumor with a denial . . . What I hear is that the Post for a long time has been trying to buy the Sun and Mr. Curtis offered 15 million . . . The Sun, I think, tilted the price up to 45 million . . . At any rate, it sent it up away out of reason, so it will be safe for you to say that there will not be any blending of those newspapers . . . You might get something out of the fact that there is a real red rooster living somewhere on 46th St. between 7th and 8th Aves.—who crows each morning very early . . . I checked up on your tip about the Jean Malins . . . She is divoring him quietly.

On May 8, at the Calumet Club, a dinner will be given in honor of Joseph Corrigan, of General Sessions . . . But wait . . . Among the speechmakers on the same dais will be "Haywire Broun, as a Tammany man just affectionately called him, and Mayor Walker . . . Oooh, bing, bang, boom, eh? . . . It might put you in a good mood to know that Monday's column contained plenty of tips that were confirmed only a few days later . . . The Otis Chatfield-Taylor-Janet Benson marriage, for instance. The Frances Williams' secret elopement with which you led off Monday was played down by the Trib, which said "the mother of the bride" revealed their secret . . . That should knock you cold . . . Incidentally, up No'th we say "it burned me up"—down South they say: "It burned me down" . . . The latter, in case you get into a controversy, is correct.

In spite of the depression, take this from one of your deputies: Carter's did more business this past winter than they did last . . . This is, up to three weeks ago . . . You might inform the feminine contingent that the weights on the scales around town have been raised five pounds . . . In other words, if you are 7 feet 7 and your weight should be 150—it now should be 155 . . . I see that Ruth Nichols is planning a solo flight across the sea, after all . . . I was just going to ask you why they always deny it so vigorously, but I presume you are still in a fret about Mr. Weitzenkorn . . . A woman called to urge you to complain to Commissioner of Parks Herrick about the "poor pigeons" who have to be fed by strangers . . . Add things to worry about . . . However, Com. Herrick tells me the pigeons are gate-crashers in the park and there are no appropriations for their menu, anyhow, and that he wishes you would so state.

Someone wants you to do a Big Thing and say something about Dave Levy, who started as a package deliverer at Nat Lewises 18 years ago. . . It seems that Mr. Levy never left Broadway, except for an occasional visit to Wilkes-Barre, his home town. . . On Saturday he is leaving for Europe on the Ile de France, and this is an event . . . The voice said that it really is important news, as Levy is better known on Broadway than you are. . . Consider yourself stifled. . . Oh, I almost forgot. . . A woman who said she was Peggy Hopkins Joyce, an actress, I believe, telephoned and wants you to call her up so she can tell you what she thinks of you, herself!. . . Because of that paragraph you ran the other day, she added. . . I told her I didn't expect you to come in this month.

Benchley has signed with the American as you hinted he would . . . He will do three columns a week . . . Dorothy Parker spurned a similar job—she is so opposed you know, to working on a newspaper . . . I suppose you will wicker this, but it just goes to show how I try to dig up things—it takes an hour to walk up to the 85th story of the new Empire Building . . . You might be able to use this, then . . . I dined at the Paramount Grill the other night, a pretty good revue, at that . . . One of the entertainers was abused by a mouse sitting at a ringside table, who tossed a cent at the actor . . . I thought the fellow handled the embarrassing situation gracefully, though . . . He merely picked up the penny, looked at it, and then, turning to the heckler, he said: "There's only one kind of animal I can think of that throws a s-cent!" . . . Talk about faces getting red!

One of your devoted admirers (you really have one) offered a brilliant suggestion on how to get away from phone pests who stay on the wire when you are busiest . . . I think it is grand . . . If you want to get rid of him or her you jangle the hook and yell: "Oh, operator, operator! Please don't cut me off!" . . . Then you hang up . . . If the party calls back, then I simply say: "Sorry, but he has just left for the day" . . . It is cruel, but can you think of a crueler one? . . . Among other things you forgot to use was the item about the sisters in a show who can't read or write . . . Their contracts are signed with X's . . . They get $1,000 weekly! . . . Joan Bennett has her own face carved on the furniture in her home.

You always seem to enjoy giving a puff to newspaper men who distinguish themselves. . . . So why not say something about Jules DuBois, who scooped everybody for the International News Service and Universal Press on the Nicaragua quake?. . . . You must remember the kid, which is exactly what he is. . . . He was once Percy Hammond's office boy. . . . Your name will not be used in "Blessed Event," the play . . . That will be a novelty. . . . My fingers still ache from replying to all those complaints about your line in "Things I. N. K. T. Now"—about the longest word in the dictionary being "incomprehensible" . . . They all bit . . . and hard, too, but I have explained the gag.

I only heard of this new racket yesterday . . . A mendicant walked into a restaurant and pleaded for some food, saying he was broke and hungry . . . The manager gave him a meal . . . When the beggar had finished, he took out his handkerchief opened it on the counter and out dropped a $20 bill . . . Naturally the manager was incensed . . . "I thought you were broke!" he thundered as he picked up the $20 note and took 50 cents out of it, handing him back the change . . . "But that isn't my money!" cried the beggar . . . He kept arguing that the money was not his and that he didn't know to whom it belonged . . . But the manager didn't care; he asked the beggar to leave . . . Later he discovered the money was counterfeit! . . . Cute?

I forget which day it was, but you made a horrible mistake—you forgot to mention the name of Lou Holtz . . . When you use a lot of dialect that way, you merely drive the composing room and proofroom a little insane, you fiend! . . . That haberdashery which you said displayed the largest shirt in the world in its windows called up to say that that shirt had triplets, which will be presented to you when they learn your size . . . Put in a kind word about Tiffany's, please . . . Outside of that nothing much happened.—R. C.

P. S.—Thanks for the stockings.

REPORTER IS PUT ON THE SPOT IN NEW STANLEY FILM

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Richard Barthelmess' newest picture, "The Finger Points," opened yesterday in the Stanley. It is all about a newspaper reporter who gets mixed up with gangsters. It recalls the name, Jake Lingle, which stared out from newspaper headlines some while back.

The key line of the picture is: You can't kill a reporter. But the "can't" becomes "can" before the finale.

The story, which concerns a reporter who accepts hush money from the underworld, was written by John Monk Saunders and W. R. Burnett. Mr. Burnett is the fellow who also wrote "Little Ceasar," and while this Barthelmess film doesn't attain the intense drama of that work, it does have a number of episodes of striking dramatic power.

The romantic angle is in triangle form, with Mr. Barthelmess, Fay Wray and Regis Toomey, former Pittsburgher, as the principals. And here's one time a home town boy comes out the winner. Thanks to the gangsters the girl is left to him. Mr. Toomey, also a newspaper reporter, gives a happy and brisk performance.

There are moments when the picture action seems to lose speed. But this isn't so marked as it has been in other Barthelmess films. There is something about Mr. Barthelmess' emoting style that, at times, has a tendency to slow up the dramatics.

However, one of the most effective scenes we have ever seen on the screen comes when Mr. Barthelmess goes walking for the last time. He moves briskly over the pavement, realizing gangster guns, as well as fingers, point his way, when suddenly, at an intersection, he bumps into a clergyman. So realistic is this that the audience itself jumps back in its seat as if to avert the collision. To John Francis Dillon, the director, goes a lot of credit for this episode.

Joe Penner, the goofy comic, is prominent on the stage and he's the same old Joe. He has the house in an uproar. Peter Higgins, appearing for a second week, gives a new program of three songs and gets large applause. The bill also includes a clever ventriloquist act. There are numerous other entertainers also and it is Bernie Armstrong who comes out and introduces the acts. The Armstrong organlogue and the Broudy overture are heard, too.

CITY GANGSTERS MEET WILD WEST IN 'GUN SMOKE'

By MILDRED FILLMORE

The big city gangsters go out to a small western town and make melodramatic whoopee, in regular Hollywood style, in "Gun Smoke," the picture current in both the Fulton and the Sheridan Square. But Richard Arlen is present to save the heroine and to make the town clean again. And when he and his hard-riding cowboys get through, dead men lay all over the streets.

Mary Brian is the girl. She tumbles for the suave line of William (Stage) Boyd, one of the city slickers, until he goes after the gold that has been discovered on her ranch. Then she begins to think Cowboy Arlen is all right, even if he does go riding all over the hills rounding up wild horses.

Louise Fazenda and Eugene Pallete are prominent in the cast and manage some comedy.

FOCH GIVES COMMAND TO HAIG

DRIVE TO FREE SOISSONS PLANNED

British Leader Placed in Full Charge of Operation; Prepare for End in 1919

In yesterday's installment Marshal Foch told of the memorandum he drew up on July 24, 1918, in which he declared that the defeat of the Germans in the Second Battle of the Marne should be exploited; that the time for vigorous Allied offensive action had come. He told how he submitted his memorandum to the Allied commanders and how they viewed it.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH
Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Armies During the Closing Phases of the World War

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

CHAPTER XXVIII

Another subject discussed at this conference was the necessity for the Allies of finishing the war in 1919. In a letter to M. Clemenceau, dated a short time before, I had asked him to call to the colors the class of 1920, beginning with the month of October, 1919, and I gave him the following reasons:

"1919 will be the decisive year of the conflict. By the spring of that year America will have reached the climax of her effort. If it is desired to shorten the war, we must wage it with the greatest possible intensity from that moment on; consequently, we must see that our armies are given all the resources we can muster; for," I said in conclusion, "the stronger we are, the sooner we shall be victorious and the more we will be listened to."

I wrote along the same lines to the commanders-in-chief on July 24, 1918, asking them to draw up a statement of the resources upon which each of them could count at the beginning of 1919, in large units, in men, in artillery, in aircraft, tanks and caterpillar transport.

Marshal Foch

As a consequence of the decisions just related and the measures taken for carrying them out, we were now about to launch, starting on August 8, a second great Franco - British offensive — the battle of Santerre. It started on August 8 and its consequences were destined to be of exceptional importance.

Ever since the 3rd of April, I had entertained the idea of driving the enemy from the salient at Montdidier as his proximity to it prevented our using the Paris-Amiens railway line.

This necessity had struck Marshal Haig, and under date of July 17 he had written me:

"The most important operation, as I see it, and one which I suggest should be executed as soon as possible, is the advancing of the Allied front east and southeast of Amiens, so as to disengage this town and the railway line. The best way of accomplishing it would be by a combined French-British operation, the French to attack south of Moreuill, the British north of the Luce. . . ."

This proposal was so perfectly in harmony with my previous instructions and with my way of looking at the matter—especially since our successes south of Soissons and in the Tardenois region—that I wished to follow it up immediately and increase its scope as much as possible. Therefore, on the 20th, I wrote to the Field-Marshal:

Sees Opportunity

"Having reached the point where we now are, it is indispensable to seize the enemy and attack him wherever we can do so to our own advantage. I am extremely glad therefore to get your letter of the 17th, in which you inform me of the various plans which you have in view for operations along your front.

"The combined attack of the British 4th and the French 1st Armies for the purpose of clearing Amiens and the railway should, it seems to me, be carried out at once, owing to the prospect it offers of most profitable results.

"I suggest that the commanding generals of the British 4th Army and of the French 1st Army be asked to at once arrange between them a plan regarding which we could come to a definite understanding later on."

And I said in conclusion:

"The enemy seems at present to be reduced to having two armies, one, an army for occupying the line, condemned to be sacrificed and consequently of no great value—as is proved by the complete success of the multiple minor operations recently undertaken by us and by the large number of prisoners captured in these operations; the second, a shock army, trained with special care, but already seriously weakened.

"This situation presents an element of weakness which we can exploit by carrying out immediately several attacks along those parts of the front held solely by inferior troops.

"The check administered to the last enemy offensive—a check that seems to become clearer every day—offers an opportunity to be seized. We must not fail to do it."

Offensive Planned

On the 26th, during a conference at Sarcus with Field Marshal Haig, Gen. Rawlinson and Gen. Debeney, we drew up the general plan of the attack. It was to start from the line at Somme-Hargicourt, the 4th British Army (Gen. Rawlinson), twelve divisions strong, to move in the direction of Chaulnes, the French 1st Army (Gen. Debeney), four to six divisions strong, in the direction of Roye.

On July 28 the operation was prescribed in detail in the following instruction:

"1. The object of the operation is to clear Amiens and the Amiens-Paris railway as well as to defeat and throw back the enemy between the Somme and the Avre.

"2. For this purpose, the offensive covered on the north by the Somme, is to be pushed forward as far as possible in the direction of Roye.

"3. It will be executed by:

(1) The British Fourth Army, composed at the start of 12 divisions of infantry and three divisions of cavalry supported by

(2) The French First Army reinforced by four divisions.

"The first will operate north, the second south of the road to Roye, as soon as the possibility of debouching south of the Luce and east of the Avre is assured."

It could be assumed that by the time this operation took place, our victory in the Soissons region would have yielded most of the results to be expected from it; therefore good reasons existed for hurrying forward the offensive South of the Somme so as not to allow the enemy any respite.

Haig Given Command

Finally, for the purpose of ensuring perfect co-operation between the British 4th Army and the French 1st Army, which were to act together, and of securing the greatest possible energy in execution, I asked Field Marshal Haig to take personal command of the two armies. It was with this idea that I sent my second communication of the above date, handed by Gen. Weygand to the Marshal at Montreuil. It ran as follows:

"Today, the 28th, our progress towards the Ardre and the Aisne is rapidly accentuated. The enemy in the Marne region is retreating toward the north. There, beyond doubt, he will take up, behind some river, a defensive position which we shall not be able to attack immediately and which will probably enable him to reorganize his forces and in a short time restore his strength.

"Under these conditions, it seems in our interest to hasten the combined operation of your 4th Army and our 1st Army. They would certainly be met by an enemy less able to cope with them.

"I ask you, therefore, to push forward as much as possible the date of these operations. I shall hasten proportionately the return of your 22nd Army Corps.

"Finally, since this attack of two Allied armies requires unified direction, I request you to take the command yourself."

Minor operations that had been carried out during the preceding weeks had already secured for the armies a better base of departure. Thus, on July 4th, the British 4th Army had captured the woods of Vaire and the village of Hamel, south of the Somme, while the French 1st Army, after taking the Anchin farm and Castel on July 12th, had, on the 23rd, gained possession of the villages and plateau of Mailly, Raineval Sauvillers and Aubvillers, capturing nearly 2,000 prisoners and several cannons.

Yankees Won Glory in Marne Battle

In today's and several previous installments of Foch's War Memoirs are his descriptions of the great strategic moves involved in the Allied counter-offensive that got under way against the Germans in July, 1918, and in which American troops played an outstanding part.

Gen. Summerall
Who Commanded the 1st Division

The Second Battle of the Marne established America as a great and decisive factor in the war, foreshadowing the inevitable result—Allied victory. After the German drive from the Chemin des Dames position southward to the Marne, which was met and checked on the direct road to Paris by the 2nd and 3rd American Divisions, there followed a lull. By order of the German high command, activity was reduced while the German divisions were rehabilitated and massed, and vast war supplies accumulated.

Striving for reserves that could be maneuvered, Marshal Foch, on July 1, had four American divisions spotted between the Germans and the Channel ports, behind the British; six American divisions stood between the Germans and Paris and one was moving into line in the Champagne, east of Rheims. Nine were in training in quiet sectors. American soldiers were arriving in France at the rate of 10,000 a day.

When the German drive started on July 15, it had as its objective the capture of Chalons, the crossing of the Marne and the envelopment of Rheims. Then the Crown Prince was to strike at Paris.

In the center of the Champagne battlefield, on the direct road to Chalons, the 42nd (Rainbow) American Division stood firm in Gouraud's French army and that half of the mighty German drive was stopped short with tremendous losses.

West of Rheims the entire 7th German Army crossed the Marne, driving the French back. Still further westward, in the road to Chalons, the 42nd (Rainbow) American Division stood firm and immovable, winning the proud title of "The Marne Division." Elements of the 28th American Division (Pennsylvania National Guard) also were engaged. It was here, in this threatening Chateau Thierry, or Marne, salient, that Foch took the offensive.

On July 18 he sent the American 3rd Army Corps, which Gen. Bullard was newly promoted to command, in a drive against the upper western side of the salient. In this corps were the 1st Division, newly led by Gen. Summerall; the 2nd Division, whose new commander was Gen. Harboard, and the French Moroccan Division, which included the remnant of the famous Foreign Legion.

When this American corps had driven through south of Soissons, cutting the chief line of communication in the salient, the Allies pressed forward against the salient from all sides.

Battalions of the 4th Division, fighting with the French, had attacked the western side of the salient, south of the Ourcq, on July 18. Jumping off from Belleau Wood, the 26th (Yankee) Division began fighting forward in a northeasterly direction on July 21. On the same day the 3rd Division crossed the Marne and took pursuit.

In the bitterly-contested open warfare which followed, the Germans stood at successive favorable positions, forcing American troops to fight always against wooded hills, entrenched ridges or village walls, advancing to attack over open ground.

The most bitter engagement occurred along the Ourcq. Here the 42nd (Rainbow) Division; the 3rd; part of the 4th; artillery of the 26th, the 28th and 32nd Divisions, fought during the last five days.

The Yankee Division broke the line of the Ourcq on July 31 and August 1. The Germans retreated to the Vesle. The Chateau Thierry salient had been wiped out.

The 77th Division was engaged in the final phase of the action, so that in all nine American divisions helped decisively in the wiping out of the great salient which threatened Paris. In the end two American Army corps, the 1st and the 3rd, under Liggett and Bullard, were side by side. [See map for progress of U. S. divisions.]

STEEL OUTPUT OFF POINT IN PAST WEEK

Drop in Chicago District Reported Substantial; Upturn Now Indicated

By B. E. V. LUTY

Steel ingot production in the Pittsburgh district has undergone no decrease in the last week or two and a precise count might easily show a slight increase. A substantial decrease occurred this week in the Chicago district and there are small changes elsewhere. In the industry as a whole production in the week has been at about 50 per cent against a point or so more the preceding week.

The recent peak rate was around 56 per cent, so that there has been approximately 12 per cent decrease. There are now some indications that the decline has ended, temporarily at least, and some of the prospects would indicate an upturn. Clearly the more common view is that steel production will continue into July, but the view rests on very flimsy grounds. Like the professional business doctors, some observers are depending too much on precedent. There are precedents suggesting such further decline but they would not be absolutely conclusive for an active year and in an off year they are no more than suggestive.

VARIETY OF USES

It is easy to talk about "seasonal decline" in steel, but steel goes into a great variety of uses, of different relative importance at different time, and those that have seasons do not have them at the same time. Fabricated structural steel is an important line, and averaging monthly shipments of the fabricating shops during the last seven years it is found that January has been the low month, with successive monthly increases to October, then decreases again. As against this conventional talk of steel decreasing from March to July, structural averaged 12 or 13 per cent increase March to July, with October 16 per cent over March.

If fabricated structural steel shipments should decrease in the next six months that would indicate that general business conditions were growing worse and that is by no means the common expectation while the heavy bookings of fabricated structural steel jobs since the first of the year make quite a different indication, as they are more than 50 per cent above bookings in the same period of last year. If Radio City and Pennsylvania Railroad electrification are counted out entirely, although some deliveries against these extended jobs will be made this year, there is still an increase of several per cent.

AUTO SCHEDULES

Another steel item that promises an increase is line pipe. The reason it actually promises an increase is that production in the last few weeks has been very light and it would not require a particularly large fraction of last year's tonnage to make it improve over its present condition.

Automobile production in March is officially reported at 289,334 cars and trucks, United States and Canada, 26 per cent increase over February and 103 per cent increase over November, the low month in the swing. April has been running slightly heavier and next month is expected to make a further gain and very naturally as the peak should come a little later than usual. Automobile and parts makers have been very close buyers in point of time and do not anticipate anything, so that increases in automobile production are still to make their impression upon steel production.

Don't Blame Machinery

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The boys who are rapping the machine age would get awfully sore if you suggested that they give up their palatial stem-winding limousines and go back to the old-fashioned things.

The college experts who decry the era of mechanism would hate to give up their electric refrigerators and fans and try to keep cool by fanning themselves again with an old exhausted door-mat.

In looking around for something to pick on, the efficiency men decided that machines had taken the place of men.

That's nothing new. A century ago the weavers of England tore into Manchester factories and ripped out American cotton weaving machinery by the roots.

Their battle cry was "American machines do the work of 50 men."

They do. But don't forget that there are 50 times more men than there were a century ago. And American machines are still doing their work. And the work will furnish jobs for everybody.

The most deadly enemy of progress is progress. The wagon masters fought the canal because it killed off the hauling-by-mule business. A couple years later the wagon-bosses were admirals on the Erie Canal. And happy.

The canals battled the railroads to their own finish. The boys who built bicycles were afraid the motor cars would ruin their racket. It did. And the first thing you know the best motor cars were being built by the boys who used to manufacture bicycles and wagons.

Since the Manchester weavers wrecked American machinery Manchester has grown and there wouldn't be any Manchester weavers if it were not for Yankee gadgets.

So don't let them tell you there is anything wrong with a jigger that will do your work and let you take it easy. In giving up labor-saving devices how would it be if the first thing discarded was the X-ray machine? Then we could go back to the good old days when doctors operated by guesswork. Or even further back when thousands died of appendicitis which was then known as the dry belly-ache.

This newspaper is printed by a press that does the work of a thousand men. That means more newspapers, more magazines, more books and more work for more men.

No, the experts on economical conditions have to look for another reason. Maybe it's the experts.

Records Show Strength Of Fixed Trusts

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

IN CONCLUDING HIS ANALYSIS of fixed investment trusts Sidney S. Korzenik declares that it is unthinkable that other corporations can at any time seriously endanger the positions of the leading organizations which are represented in most of the trust portfolios.

While this appears to be a broad statement in view of the rapid changes which have taken place in the industrial picture during the present century, Mr. Korzenik declares that every one of the significant developments of the past 10 years has been identified with the companies whose stocks are held by the principal fixed trusts. He states that these companies and the hundreds of affiliated companies stretching out into every department of modern life, constitute a natural market for new inventions and improvements, in addition to the research in which they are constantly engaged.

With such safeguards Mr. Korzenik insists that no investor can go very far wrong who hitches his investment program to the stars of present day leaders in the industrial field.

Answers Previous Analysis

MR. KORZENIK'S SURVEY of fixed investment trusts was prepared in answer to conclusions drawn in this column last February in a series of articles which pointed to some serious dangers in the development of the distributive type of fixed trust. Recognizing that there is room for much difference of opinion in a phase of investment which is so distinctly new, Mr. Korzenik's remarks have been reviewed in this column during the past week.

In discussing the restrospective analyses of fixed trusts Mr. Korzenik says:

"Most fixed trusts in this country have been in existence less than two years. An examination of their earning power during this period, therefore, scarcely provides an accurate basis upon which to forecast future expectations, especially since the years 1929 and 1930 were characterized by unusually liberal dividend distributions.

Retrospective Studies

"THE SPONSORS OF THESE trusts as a consequence have gone back to the earning records of the companies underlying their portfolios upon which to base their projections. In so doing, the better known of the trusts have repeatedly stated that they do not wish to suggest that identical results may be expected in the future, but they do contend that yesterday and its experiences are the investor's most dependable guide for tomorrow.

"In order to strike an approximate average, therefore, of the earning possibilities of their shares over a period of time, a study has been made by one of the largest of the distributive type of trusts of the 18-year distributions of its constituent companies. This study reveals that had the trust been in existence during that period of time, the average yearly distribution on the cost of the trust shares would have been 14.2 per cent, taking into account cash dividends and all extra disbursements such as stock split-ups, and that the original investment would have been more than twice returned.

History Given Weight

"AS THE SPONSORS of one well-known trust point out, the corporations have been selected because of the essential character of the industries they represent; their position of leadership in these industries; the size of their aggregate resources; the ability and progressiveness of their management; the stability of their earning power and their demonstrated ability to maintain an unbroken dividend record over a period of years.

"One of the largest fixed trusts states that the selection of the 28 stocks in its portfolio involved the analysis of 1,105 stocks. The number was narrowed to 312, then to 82; intensive studies then cut the list to 36, from which the 28 issues were finally selected. Thirty-year records were studied.

"A study of offering circulars of fixed trusts shows that similar cases could be mentioned as typifying the careful preparations used by their sponsors before appealing to the public for its investment funds. The result has been the inclusion in the portfolios of equities of companies with records dating back 30 to 100 years and with dividend payments that were uninterrupted by panics, wars, crop failures, floods, fire or earthquakes. The two largest trusts boast that the average age of the companies in their portfolios are 56 and 55 years and the unbroken dividend records of the shares, 33 and 31 years respectively.

Germany Good U. S. Petroleum Buyer

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The United States supplies over 46 per cent of Germany's oil imports, which despite the depression established a new high record during 1930, the Commerce Department is advised.

German imports of petroleum products totaled 23,450,000 barrels, valued at almost $100,000,000, in 1930, compared with 18,900,000 barrels, valued at $90,000,000, imported in 1929.

Refrigerator Car Shipments Higher

CLEVELAND, April 25.—Railroad refrigerator car shipments are being well maintained and are now running counter to the downward trend of passenger and freight traffic, according to figures compiled by the City Ice and Fuel Company, largest factor in the icing of refrigerator cars. Fruit and vegetable shipments as reflected in these car movements showed a substantial increase in the first two months of this year, indicating that the rise in consumption of the past few years is being continued through the depression.

CITY'S STORAGE FACILITIES IMPROVED

Central Warehouse Built To Meet Local Needs; Insurance Rates Low

Pittsburgh storage facilities have been greatly improved by the construction of the Central Warehouse to take care of general merchandise received over the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad.

The new warehouse has the largest storage capacity in Pittsburgh and was constructed to meet the increasing need of manufacturers, producers, jobbers and brokers here.

SEVEN STORIES HIGH

The Central Warehouse, a structure of steel, concrete and brick, seven stories high, has six storage floors. Each floor has 60,000 square feet of space. Two basements have an aggregate of 26,000 square feet of storage area, making a total of 386,000 square feet, the equivalent of 8½ acres.

The six floors above ground level are utilized for general storage. The sub-level floor is used for storing oil, tallow, grease, rope, inks, vinegar and sauer kraut.

FIRE HAZARD LOW

Seven five-ton hydraulic lifts with large platforms make possible the handling and storage of automobiles, trucks and articles to a length of 25 feet.

Because the worehouse is up-to-the-minute in construction and equipment, it offers not only efficiency in the expeditious and convenient handling of goods, but also assurance of safety from fire—with accompanying low insurance rates. The building is not only fireproof throughout, but a complete automatic sprinkler system reduces fire hazard to almost nothing.

SELF SERVICE IN SHOE SHOP

A new method of selling and dislaying shoes in large quantity and variety has been introduced in Pittsburgh in the new cafeteria style, serve-yourself-if-you-like shoe department in the basement of Frank & Seder.

Hundreds of Pittsburgh women today inspected 26,000 pairs of shoes in all colors, sizes and styles displayed there in an original fashion on wall racks and tables. A unique system of ticketing according to sizes, price and style range permits women who prefer to make their own selections.

Style trends in shoes, as indicated by the large display, range in popularity from black, dark blue and reptile, to parchment, gray and white.

Although long vamps and narrow toes are the prevailing vogue, flappers who are not very tall lean toward three-inch spike heels with accompanying short vamps for wear with the new long dresses.

MARKET ACTION RAISES SLUMP QUESTION

Issue Is Whether Stocks Reflect Disappointment Or Further Depression

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The recent spectacular weakness at the stock exchange raises anew the question as to how far along we have passed in the cycle of depression.

The crucial issue is whether the market is reflecting disappointment over the slowness of recovery thus far, or whether it is predicting still more disturbing conditions for the future.

Mr. Rukeyser

Although prophecy is hazardous, the unemotional observer should bear in mind that the stock market has been behind the parade of economic events for nearly two years. It has been following changes in business rather than forecasting them.

The current reaction should be judged in the light of the mild impulse toward speculative whoopee which was manifest during the premature and ill-fated winter rally.

History has more or less repeated itself, as compared with the annals of 1930. The sharp winter rise failed to follow through, but instead was followed by decisive spring weakness.

Apart from the expression of fear waves on the stock ticker, the statistical record of business indicates that the major decline in trade was checked in December, and that business in the large has been subsequently moving sidewise a little above the bottom.

According to the statistical curve compiled for the use of its own executives by one of the billion-dollar corporations, general business was 33.8 per cent below normal in January, only 31.6 below normal in February, and in March, according to the preliminary estimate, 30 per cent below normal. In other words, with business in the large still greatly depressed, it advanced slightly toward normal during the first quarter of the year.

Smart Collar—Chic Sleeves
Pattern 2007
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

Combining cleverly styled lines with fabric contrast, we present in today's sketch one of fashion's loveliest spring models. The deep, pointed collar softly held by a fabric strap, is extremely becoming. The skirt flare ends in front to form a slenderizing panel which is cut in one with the body of the dress. Unusually lovely are the sleeves, snugly fitted at the wrist and forming graceful flares above. Pattern 2007 makes up beautifully in plain or printed flat crepe, georgette or marocain. Shades of brown, blue and red are good for coatless days.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4⅜ yards of 39-inch fabric.

No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred), for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

PAINTING HELPS TO PRESERVE PROPERTY

Owners Should Consider Paint an Investment; Advantages Manifold

Pittsburghers who are searching for ways and means to participate in the city's clean-up and paint-up campaign from April 26 to May 10 should not neglect the importance of paint as an investment.

Painting should be regarded as an investment rather than an expenditure. The advantages of a fresh coat of paint are manifold. Increased attractiveness, although perhaps the most pleasant aspect, is less important than the preservative value of paint. Buildings last longer and remain in better condition through the vicissitudes of weather when they are painted at frequent intervals.

NEW FRONT INSTALLED

When money is invested in stocks, one naturally goes to a reliable broker. When money is invested in paint, one should also consider the reliability of the company being considered for the job of painting or decorating. Reliability in the business world is usually interpreted in terms of years of service in a community.

The P. A. Freyvogel Co., which recently transformed the front of the National Biscuit Company's building, 409 Liberty avenue, to a new modern buff brick, has 30 years of service to the people of Pittsburgh to recommend its work next week in the clean-up and paint-up campaign.

PARK SETS UP 'CARE FUND'

Civilization has progressed a long step from the funeral pyre and the Egyptian mummy case. The equality and democracy of death is nowhere better expressed than in the modern non-sectarian cemetery in Pittsburgh, the Allegheny County Memorial Park.

More than 3,000 families in Pittsburgh have been attracted by the idea of democratic simplicity in the restrictions placed against the erection of monuments, tombstones and private memorials in the park.

According to M. H. Sloan, publicity director for the company, in the 18 months the Allegheny County Memorial Park has been accepting interments, burial services have been conducted there by ministers of practically every denomination.

Perpetual care is assured each owner of a lot or grave in the park, without assessment additional to the original cost. A perpetual care trust fund insures against any neglected or poorly kept graves. The Colonial Trust Company of Pittsburgh is trustee of this fund.

CEMENT PRICE WAR ON

NEW YORK, April 25—A price war, marked by descent of bids to sub-cellar levels in the face of destructive competition for state highway concrete, is ravaging the cement industry, according to facts cited by Engineering News-Record. Pointing out that approximately 10,000,000 barrels already have been sold at abnormally low prices for public works operations, it warns that the present orgy of price cutting will cost cement manufacturers a net loss conservatively estimated at $50,000,000.

News of the markets and reports of contract lettings prove that the war is on, says the engineering publication. The net price at mill has gone to around $1 per barrel. A few large contracts have been taken ever lower, and a 74c cent bid is reported. These figures are at least 50 cents below those prevailing at the beginning of the year, and are below production costs.

Cement producing capacity is much above consumption, nearly double the consumption of the last few years, says the engineering publication, in outlining causes leading to the price war. Capacity has grown steadily but demand years, and has declined a little—has remained stationary for four from 180 to 160 million barrels.

TRUCK TO MIX CONCRETE ON THE FLY

TRUCK CONCRETE-MIXING UNIT TO BE USED AS MIXER OR CONVEYOR FOR READY-MIXED

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK, April 25.

ASK ME THE MOST annoying person I can think of and I will tell you without any hesitation that the pass pest is that person. I don't know where the notion originated, but the average individual seems to think that any newspaperman has plenty of passes for everything from the opening night of a Follies to Peggy Joyce's boudoir.

When I first started in this silly game I resented the pass pest to a great extent and attempted to argue with him. I would work myself into a lather in an attempt to explain why the request couldn't be granted. But as time wore on and I recognized the futility of such an argument I cut it all out. Now when the pass pest sneaks up on me, I merely say I'm sorry and let it go at that.

The nerve of some of these people is absolutely astounding. It is not at all unusual for me to receive a phone call along the following lines:

"Hello, Mark? Well, well, well! You know who this is? You don't, eh? Well, I don't wonder you can't recognize the voice. It must be 20 years since you and I were kids together on Nineteenth street. This is Roger Blimp!

"What's that? You don't remember me? You don't remember Roger Blimp? Well, well, well! It doesn't seem possible. Don't you remember the time you and I were pitching pennies with Alan David, and Gertrude walked down the block with her father who—

"What's that? What do I want? Well—ha, ha—it's this way, Mark. I belong to a little club that has about 20 members. Just a little social group, you know. We were talking about you at a meeting the other night and I was telling the boys how well I knew you. I told them you were a great guy, too.

"Now here's the idea, Mark. The club would like to see a show some night next week. We already voted on that. But, as I said to them, what's the use of buying tickets when I can call up my old pal, Mark? Do you think you can fix us up? There'll only be 20 of us and I can tell you right now that the boys would certainly appreciate it."

If you think I'm exaggerating, you're very much mistaken. Some of these pass pests would astound you. I had a young fellow walk into my office last summer and ask me seriously if I couldn't fix him up for a trip around the world on the SS. Belgenland! He was very nice about it, though. He said he didn't care where his stateroom was.

One of the best squelches a pass pest ever received is credited to Nick Holde, manager of "Three's a Crowd," the highly successful musical show at the Selwyn Theater. Nick was standing in the lobby before a performance recently when he was accosted by a fresh youth who demanded a pass for the show.

"I'm Soandso's nephew," he cried, mentioning one of the stars of the show. "She told me to come around tonight and you'd pass me in. Please hurry up about it."

Nick was extremely courteous.

"So you're Soandso's nephew, are you?" he murmured.

"Sure I am," replied the youth. "And she said I was to get a very good seat."

The manager looked around and summoned an elderly lady from across the lobby.

"Did you ever see this lady before?" asked Nick.

The boy shook his head.

"No," he replied, "I did not. What's the idea of that question?"

The manager smiled.

"This lady happens to be the mother of your aunt, Miss Soandso," he said, easily. "I just wanted to introduce you to your grandmother!". . .

Just one more little episode and I'll drop this pass stuff for the time being. It happened some three years ago when I was sitting in my newspaper office around 8 in the morning. The porter, a white man in his early 30's, was cleaning up. He stopped at my desk.

"Mr. Hellinger," he said, "I just want to tell you that the piece you wrote yesterday was the best I've ever seen. All your stuff is swell. But that story was certainly the cats."

I nodded agreeably. Nice of this porter to be pleasant. As a matter of fact, I thought that story was pretty good myself.

"Thanks," I muttered.

He hesitated.

"Mr. Hellinger," he went on, "I'm awful anxious to see that picture at Loew's State this week. You haven't got a spare pass on you, have you?"

I dug into my desk and brought out the pass.

"Here," I chirped as I gave it to him. "Anything to oblige a constant reader."

The porter thanked me and departed. An hour or so later the superintendent of the building walked through and stopped to chat with me.

"Nice fellow, that porter who works around here in the mornings," I observed. "I like him."

"Yes," agreed the superintendent. "Too bad about him, though. I'd like to advance him and give him something decent to do. But he's under too much of a handicap."

I asked what the trouble was. The superintendent shook his head.

"It's tough," he murmured. "The poor fellow can't read or write"

NEWS ITEM. Found by J. Hume in a recent Jersey Observer.

Must have been a breath-taking experience . . .

FROM Percy Crosby, creator of the character of "Skippy," which has been turned into one of the finest pictures ever made, comes the always excellent story of the colored man who was about to be placed on trial. He had no lawyer and the court very promptly assigned two young attorneys to act as the Negro's counsel. He looked at the two youngsters in very evident disgust.

"Is there something else you wanted?" asked the judge.

"Yeah, judge," replied the colored man slowly, "If it's all de same to yo', Ah'd like to exchange mah lawyers fo' a couple o' good witnesses!" . . .

BOBBY CONNOLLY, great dance director, who will stage the dances for the new Follies, sat with a group of newspapermen the other night while we were discussing bad notices. Bobby's contribution was, I think, the best of the lot.

It seems that, shortly after the war, Connolly went to London to stage a show that had been a success on Broadway. At this time the English were very much against all American artists and there was much agitation about the situation. As a result, the London papers were rapping American show people in beautiful fashion.

In the face of this difficulty, Connolly produced his show. He was confident the show was so good it couldn't be rapped. The morning after the premiere the first paper he turned to had the following notice as a complete criticism:

"A chap named Connolly came from America and staged a show that opened last night. Why?..."

BLAW-KNOX HAS NEW MIXER

After years of research and development the Blaw-Knox Company has placed on the market a truck mixing unit which is not only designed for mixing but can be used as a closed type agitating body for conveying pre-mixed concrete.

The Blaw-Knox "Trukmixer" overcomes all difficulties which have been experienced with the truck mixing method in getting positive water control, thorough and uniform mixing, rapid mixing, clean discharge of all consistencies of concrete mixes, and many other details that have proven troublesome to solve.

The Blaw-Knox "Trukmixer" is featured for the production of high-grade concrete mixes. The control of concrete mixing is removed entirely from the truck driver and automatic functioning of mixing, water control and discharge is provided.

Concrete can be mixed very rapidly and uniformly with the Blaw-Knox "Trukmixer," which is especially desirable in connection with short hauls and where a dry or lean mix is used. Blaw-Knox "Trukmixers" are made in capacities of two, three, four and five cubic yards for mixing, and from two to eight cubic yards for agitating pre-mixed concrete.

MOTORS TAKE MORE GLASS

Greater activity in the plate glass field, as a result of large orders placed by automobile manufacturers, was the week's one major development in the flat glass industry, according to American Glass Review. In other sections of the market, including both window and rolled glass products, the demand showed comparatively little change for the better.

The improved demand for plate glass was reflected in increased production at both the plate and laminated glass factories of a large producer. During the coming week another leading manufacturer is expected to accelerate operations. This increased activity, while due principally to large orders recently placed for safety glass, also represents a steady improvement in plate glass business from the automobile industry.

Indicative of the strengthening demand for this product are the figures on last month's production of polished plate glass, released this week. The March output, it is shown, was appreciably in excess of that in the two preceding months this year. A gain, although relatively small, was also shown over the March, 1930, production. In view of the recent larger orders from automobile factories, April production is expected to show a rather substantial increase, compared with both last month and April of 1930.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY GAINS

Volume of Business for Department Stores Up; Collections Improve

Retail business has been quite active during the past week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Department stores have transacted quite a fair volume of business, particularly in seasonal lines.

The jobbing trade reports demand somewhat better for women's and children's wearing apparel in particular, although men's wear lines are still moving rather slowly. There is not much change reported in the demand for dry goods and notions and while hosiery is moving in fair volume, prices are reported 25 to 30 per cent lower than last year at this time. Building construction continues to drag and only a slight improvement is noted in the demand for lumber and other building materials.

COAL OUTPUT OFF

Crude oil production shows a very sharp increase and some reductions have been reported in prices paid to producers. Production of bituminous coal shows a further drop and is nearly 20 per cent lower than it was a year ago, with prices continuing low and unsatisfactory to producers.

Although collections have improved slightly in some lines, the general average continues from fair to slow.

BUSINESS INDEX DROPS LOWER

NEW YORK, April 25.—The slight spring stimulus seems to have spent its force by the latter part of March and business has been backsliding since, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today. The index has steadily declined during the past five weeks till, at 77.7 per cent of normal for the week ended April 18, it is nearly back to the December low. This compares with 78.1 in the preceding week and 93.9 per cent in the corresponding week last year.

Security markets have closely followed suit and commodity prices continue their relentless movement toward inconceivably low levels. Seasonal building improvement seems to be weakening again, and carloadings still show little more than seasonal recovery. Hope of reversal of the downward drift of steel production by May persists under expectation of larger structural and pipe-line demand, but marked increase in automotive requirements becomes doubtful. It now appears likely that first quarter business improvement was only a bump on the bottom and not the definite beginning of recovery.

FIRM ACQUIRES NEW LOCATION

The Hunter Machinery Company, distributors of construction machinery and contractors' supplies, announce the opening of their new showroom, warehouse, service department and shop at 920 Manchester boulevard, North side.

This new location combines the sales, service and repair facilities of the company. This location was selected because of its proximity to transportation terminals and its nearness to the downtown business district.

The front of the building is occupied by a very fine showroom in which is displayed a complete line of construction machinery and equipment.

The Hunter Machinery Company not only sells, but rents construction equipment and represents many of the largest and most prominent manufacturers of contractors' machinery. The company recently took on the sale of Byers' cranes and shovels, made by the Byers Machine Company.

'Clean Up'

H. E. HOLLIS

WOULD LOWER REFUSE COSTS

Pittsburghers, busy next week in the city-wide clean up and paint up campaign, can turn their attention to no better problem than the disposition of garbage and rubbish. H. E. Hollis, general manager of the Pittsburgh Incinerator Company, says:

"There is no branch of municipal service that has progressed so slowly in the United States as the disposal of garbage. This expensive item of municipal administration is too often handled by antiquated methods, with the result that the average basement, back porch or yard is cluttered up with rubbish, papers, bed mattresses, old clothing, broken, inflammable articles and a germ-ladened garbage can."

This condition exists, Hollis believes, because the desirability of sanitary collection and disposal is not fully appreciated by the public and by city officials.

The logical way to increase municipal sanitation and decrease the city's garbage collection costs, Hollis pointed out, is to eliminate basement storage of rubbish and the garbage can at the back door by providing standard incinerators in each dwelling.

Ask Me Why?

By EVERIT B. TERHUNE

What is the inventory situation at the present time?

Generally speaking, inventories are the lowest since the war.

Won't replacement buying soon be felt?

We will begin to feel the effects of replacement buying from now on.

Will this help business?

A five per cent increase in the rate of consumption will probably start a stampede of replacement and transform this buyer's market into a seller's market.

Pittsburgh's Building Expansion
Building expenditures in Pittsburgh, exclusive of its scores of populous suburbs, during the past six years have averaged over $39,000,000 annually. In one year there were 26 buildings in course of construction, each of which was to cost over $1,000,000 for building alone—the land being valued separately. Five of these buildings were valued at more than $5,000,000 each. Three of Pittsburgh's new buildings are over 500 feet high.

OLD WALL ST. FIRM SUSPENDS

NEW YORK, April 24.—(AP.)—The old Wall Street firm of Pynchon & Co., an international banking house doing an extensive business in securities and commodities, was forced to suspend yesterday.

Suspensions by the New York Curb Exchange and the Chicago Stock Exchange followed immediately, and an involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed against the firm in Federal District Court.

A joint statement issued on behalf of the firm's 22 partners—the largest number for any stock exchange house save one—attributed the difficulties to sharp declines in securities in which the firm and its customers actively dealt, and expressed the hope and the belief that creditors would not suffer. It added that every effort would be bent toward reorganization with new capital.

While estimates of the firm's assets and liabilities were unavailable, it was reported that its borrowings in the brokers' loan market amounted to $38,000,000.

In addition to its security business, the firm did substantial business in wheat in Chicago, and in the New York cotton market and was interested in other commodities. The firm was formed as Raymond, Pynchon & Co. in 1895, and became Pynchon & Co. in 1917 when George Raymond withdrew.

PLANT MISHAPS OFF IN MARCH

HARRISBURG, April 25.—Accidents in industry during March continued at the lowest level reached in the 16 years for which records are available. Reports of 129 fatal and 9,091 non-fatal accidents were received at the Bureau of Workmen's Compensation during the month. March and October were selected as the two months in 1931 during which intensive industrial accident prevention efforts should be made because the records for past years showed distinct accident peaks for these two months. The record of accidents for March, 1931, shows that the customary accident peak for this month has been eliminated. The total of accidents for March, 1931, is lower than the total for the corresponding month in any previous year, and is the second lowest industrial accident total for any month since January, 1916.

Unquestionably, the low level of accidents obtaining in industry at this period is due in a large measure to the industrial depression, but appears that industry's concentrated safety effort for the month was successful in lopping off the usual March peak. Fatal accidents for March, 1931, were 12.2 per cent higher than in March, 1930, but the total of nonfatal accidents for March, 1931, showed a 24.8 per cent reduction as compared with the non-fatal accident total for March last year. In comparison with the accident totals for February, 1931, March shows an increase of 12 fatal and 164 non-fatal accidents. This increase is accounted for by the greater number of working days in March than in February.

Raskob Says GMO Is Cheap Under $50 a Share

NEW YORK, April 25.—John J. Raskob, sailing for Europe, said he felt the bears were overcrowding the bear side, much as bulls overstayed the bull side in 1929. He said:

"It is ridiculous for General Motors to sell below 50, as in the first six months its earnings were almost certain to exceed dividend requirements by 20 per cent."

Cuckoo Clock Old Idea

The first cuckoo clock was made 200 years ago by a German clock maker, Franz Anton Ketterer, of Schoenwald, in the Black forest.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Does Your Girl Have You On the Spot, Too?

He suspects that he's being taken for a ride.

And our hunch is that he's 100 per cent right.

No . . . it isn't a gang that has him on the spot . . .

It's a girl!

A sweet, cooing, star-eyed little lady, who is "too young to even think of getting married"—to hear her tell it—but who slips her lovely arms about Our Hero's neck and hangs on for dear life the minute he suggests that maybe he'd better not see her so often.

So what's a boy to think?

Suggested Marriage

"I just can't understand women!" he groans, begging us to throw him a few hints.

"Dear Sally:

"Here's one for the book, so I'll pound it out and ask you what you think of it, while I'm in the humor. I'll admit, right at the start, that I can't understand women . . . my 'femme' has a complex . . . far beyond me . . . I have to sprint to even come in last.

"She is 19 and I am 22. She has been my 'steady' for two years now. She is good-looking, and a real sport. She will drink, if that is necessary to be congenial, and she is well liked. She has never two-timed me once to my knowledge and I think my knowledge is correct. So much for that. Here is the part that has me ga-ga.

"I have planned for some time to put on the old ball and chain, but whenever I have suggested getting engaged she has told me that she is too young, and couldn't think of it for at least two years.

"Do you think she is too young? I don't. But I didn't tell her what I thought. I pretend to agree with her, and let that matter be 'postponed.' That was last December, and nothing more has been said about it since, until last night.

"I figured that perhaps I was being 'used' by her all this time . . . and that maybe she didn't ever want to hook up with me . . . so last night I had a sort of serious talk with her, and suggested we part for a month or so, and see if we really missed each other. At the mention of this, she put her beautiful little arms around me, and . . . well, I know that she didn't want me to break off with her, so that was off, right there.

Wants Advice

"It seemed that the lights were with me, so I followed up with 'How about being engaged?' She gives me a warm look, but the same cold answer I got before. So I went home in the dark last night, in more ways than one.

"If she loves me as she says she does, why won't she get engaged? Or if she doesn't love me why doesn't she let me know, and end it? I guess this is what I get for falling in the first place, and in the second place, I think I ought to break with her, pronto. But here I am, asking you what to do! Well, do your darndest!

"ONE DIZZY WILLIE."

So you "don't understand women?" Did you ever really try? The chances are 999 to 1,000 that you didn't. Oh, yes, I know you've gone around wondering and puzzling about them . . . , asking yourself endless questions, making endless surmises . . . But you've done it with a preconceived notion that there was some deep, dark, impenetrable mystery about females, which no mere man could ever hope to unravel.

That's the way most men think about women. And they think that way because they like to feel that way. It flatters them to think women are irresponsible, unreasonable, impulsive little saps, and that all the sound sense belongs to the males. They never dream of applying the same tests to woman's conduct that they would apply to man conduct. They prefer to think that women are "different." So they kid themselves . . . And then blame women for the resultant mess.

Romance Racketeer

Women aren't different. When a femme sees something she wants, she usually goes after it with a cold logic and a shrewd appreciation of the "enemy's" vulnerable spots that would make Napoleon look like a rank amateur. And that is what your "mysterious" sweetie is doing just now. There is actually nothing weird or strange about either her method or her desire. She wants a handy what-not to take her out for a large time . . . but she doesn't want to commit herself or give anything in return.

If you saw a man working the same stuff, you'd recognize his racket immediately—you wouldn't fall for it for a second. But because this particular little romance racketeer happens to be a female, you feel sure there must be some black magic in it somewhere. And because she has your number, she is getting by with her stuff.

And that's how—and why—nine out of ten Gimme Girls are able to take Big, Busy, Brainy men for a ride. There's no mystery about their method. They simply play masculine stupidity and conceit.

What'll you do about it? Act as you would with any selfish, scheming man. Follow that hunch which you have—when you happen to forget that she's a woman. It's good dope. Tell her straight that you're not going to hang around and waste your time . . . make her fish or cut bait.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

Carol: Don't let anybody use so much X-ray on your face that the skin will be burned off so that it won't come back. That happened to a girl I know and she's been traveling over the country since trying to get some relief. The best physicians in Vienna and France told her there was no help for her. Be careful of your remedies and your doctors. Better not to have such a scrumitious complexion than to be permanently disfigured. Ask a reputable physician who doesn't do that kind of work himself, and he will direct you to a good skin doctor, for your particular trouble.

Will the lady who wrote that she couldn't afford chickens and supported her family, on a farm, with her milk and cream money, explain to the farmer lady in Illinois WHY she keeps a hired man? She thinks the picture absurd in view of the fact that there are only cows to care for and a husband to do that and an income so pitifully small. Bad management somewhere, she says.

New Jersey: If your husband objects to you and his daughters laughing, won't let you turn on the radio, finds fault continually, and objects to doing anything for any of you, yet is sober and industrious and stays at home, I'd say he is probably unable to help himself. He sounds more ill than devilish. Why not ask your family doctor about him? I'm sorry for you. It's a trial, I know.

You are a brave woman, Mrs. S., and I like your frankness. This correspondent tells me her husband is housekeeper and housemaid and she is the wage earner, because the husband hasn't been able to get work. That's what I call pluck, and as she says, "Things seem to be topsy turvy in this world at present." She wishes the blonde who complained of $50 a week pin money and wanted $100 could tell her how to keep a family of five on $25 a week. She'd be obliged.

Mrs. B., of Altoona, N. Y., lost two babies, a boy and a girl, shortly after birth. Another child is expected this summer, and meantime she wants to adopt a boy about a year old, to take the place of the child she lost.

Pretty fine girl, don't you think? Can't discourage her. She loves children better than anything on earth except her husband.

If you think you have trouble, hear about Mrs. A., in Camden, N. J. Her husband makes from $50 to $60 a week out of a business he won't bother with but hires someone to run for him. She has two children, slightly over 10 years of age, and she went to work to make enough to pay her bills so the husband cut her allowance from $13 a week to $10. The husband comes home at 1 a. m., and she "fights with him to try to make him understand what she is entitled to" and it makes no impression. He has a car and rides about, while he says she doesn't know how to handle money anyway so she can't have any more than $10. She would "like to leave him," but wants advice.

Will the lady who refused the $50 pin money read that carefully.

Oh, forget it Buddy, you are a baby and the girl is an experienced woman of the world. If you give her a dime you should have your head examined. She's working you and in love with the other man. Finding these things out is a tragedy of life, but not as great a one as NOT finding out.

(If I'm wrong, write me, care Universal Service, 63 Park Row, New York City).

Household Hints

To remove grass stains rub them with a little fresh lard or butter; then wash as usual and the stains will disappear.

The inclosed porch will be brightened immensely if an attractive linoleum is used as a floor covering.

Rinsing lace in skimmed milk instead of bluing water leaves it soft and creamy. For best results put tissue paper over it before pressing.

Cream mayonnaise dressing: Add one cupful of cream, beaten until stiff, to the mayonnaise dressing. Serve immediately or place it in the ice box for a few hours.

King Of The Slack Wire Artists -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

Between the hearts, and the different natures, of a man and a woman, Love, to stay Love, must keep the most delicate kind of a balance. Or off he goes; to be shattered in plentiful pieces. And you know, of course, that he is a relative of Humpty-Dumpty—that is to say, he has the same strange peculiarity as that egg-shaped character—once broken, he is UNmendable! Once he is apart, NOTHING, so the scholarly-sconces in matters of Love say, NOTHING can get him together again—save in the most unsatisfactory way that fools nobody and is liable to fall apart again at the slightest jar.

Nothing—not even all those King's horses and all those King's men, all the best intentions, the most honest struggles, the most desperate pains, can make as good as new the dear little god who airily treads the slack-wire—sometimes the tight-rope—between two lovers, once he has plunged off and flattened himself pitifully on the hard, cold earthy-earth of unlovely fact.

However, he is the best there is at skipping the most difficult path in the world. And the world sits back, the world—that is to say, THEIR FRIENDS—sits back and wonders and applauds at the spectacle of this airy boy-faery keeping his place on the delicate thread from one heart to another for years—and years—and forever and aye, as he sometimes does.

Balanced there lightly trembling, sometimes apprehensive, but never saying so, while the man and the woman change slowly from the "Shepherd and His Love" lapped in romance, through the figures of "The Family" with romance slightly dimmed by the hard light of care, to "Darby and Joan" with snowed-upon heads going back into "The Dream" again together.

And he never falls off, to the wonder and delight of the believers in the possibility of undying Love! Until the rest of his act have no need of him longer; when he folds his little "ellas" and his heart-string, and goes—WHITHER?

Where does the Love, who never fell, as Humpty-Dumpty did, and was broken, through the life of a man and woman who are true lovers, go, when the lovers themselves are gone?

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Edith Tells Dicky About Seeing Madge

"Mr. Graham's decision is final?" Mr. Veritzen asked when I had given him Dicky's ultimatum concerning Mary's refusal of Colin Cameron's offer, and upon my affirmative reply he rose to go. I went to the door with him, uttering the perfunctory hope that we should soon see him at the farm and closed the door after him with a thankful little feeling that the disagreeable interview had been finished before Dicky's return.

"He took it better than I expected," Lillian observed as she, too, rose to go. "He's boiling inside, of course, but he can't very well show his choler. That would give away the fact that his is the baton to which young Cameron is posturing. I wish I knew what he's planning behind that mask of his. I think one thing got under his skin last night, however."

"Noel's frail appearance?" I queried.

Lillian nodded.

"After all, Phil is normally a generous and most affectionate soul, if the original balky mule. If he's coming out of his brainstorm, at all—something about which I'm completely at sea, he can't help but feel Noel's condition. And the boy is all he has in the world. There's one thing certain, if you can't succeed in making him capitulate at Christmas time, when all his emotional pores are open, you never can do it any other time. So don't let anything stand in your way — save honor, of course."

She threw me a mocking kiss and went back to her own apartment. Thirty seconds later I heard Dicky's key in the lock.

"All alone?" he asked breezily as he came in, but an intangible something in his voice made me wary, and I answered promptly and truthfully.

"Just now, yes. But Lillian and Mr. Veritzen just left."

"Yes, I saw the old goat hoofing it down the stairs as I came up on the elevator and concluded he was paying a party call."

His voice was derisive and ill natured and I rose to the spur.

"But as it happened, he wasn't," I said. "I asked Lillian to come over and then I telephoned him to come up here."

"Why?"

"Because I wanted him to know at once what you had decided about Mary and that talkie offer."

"It couldn't wait, I suppose, until I got home and told him myself, or better still, told Cameron. He's the man to notify."

"You know how hard it is to get hold of anyone like Cameron," I said, trying to keep my voice calm and reasonable. "And we're going to the farm so early in the morning that I thought we'd better get the message delivered. You agree with me I'm sure, that Mr. Veritzen is really the one to whom the message should be delivered. Young Cameron is only a mouth-piece. And I made it clear to Mr. Veritzen that you were the one who objected to Mary's accepting the offer. I didn't wish to appear to usurp your prerogative."

"Nor to incur the old dodo's displeasure yourself," Dicky countered sardonically. "Always the considerate first aid to the injured aren't you. Well! It's all right with me. I'm not sold on talking to old Phil at any time—mighty glad to shunt the job to anybody else. But may it be permitted a humble, curious husband to inquire just what brand of Christmas shopping you were doing upstate this morning?"

I thanked my particular little joss that I had anticipated this question and was prepared for it. With an ironical little smile I looked at him.

"Edith didn't lose any time, did she?" I asked.

"Ede," Dicky repeated blustering. "What's she got to do with it?"

"Everything," I returned.

"That's a——" Dicky began hotly, then dropped his voice to a sullen note. "Suppose she did mention it casually. That doesn't explain a journey like that out of the city upon this last day when you're supposed to be so busy, you don't know which is your right hand."

"I did not know that I was under the obligation to explain all my movements to you," I began, then my voice softened instinctively and I rushed on, "but I'd be glad to, Dicky, only it isn't my own affair at all. I did make a short journey out of town this morning, stayed up all night so I could get an early train and return in time to finish my shopping. But the journey was made because of another person, outside of the family. Some time I can explain it to you. Now I can't."

"Won't you mean," Dicky retorted with a snarl which banished my meekness.

"As you like," I said shortly, and Dicky, turning, looked down at me steadily for a long half minute.

"I see it now, you anointed little idiot," he said, with a surprising change in his voice. "You went up to the Catskills on some errand for Lillian."

"Oh, don't say that," I whispered. "Lillian didn't know I went."

"And you don't want her to know," Dicky said shrewdly. "That cinches it. You've been up at Cosgrove's to see Robert Savarin about her."

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

Peroxide and powdered pumice stone form a paste that is effective to use with orange wood stick for the purpose of detaching cuticle from the nail base and sides. Send the stick around in a circular motion.

* * *

A rose-red nose may be caused by impaired circulation, in which case rubbing the body with moistened salt every morning, removing the crystals with cold water will prove beneficial. If the diet is at fault, cut down on rich, heavy dishes and subsist mainly on lean meats, poultry, fish, green salads, vegetables and fruit juices. Apply ointment of zinc oxide nightly.

* * *

The vinegar rinse is a help to the femme whose chief beauty plaint is only hair. It makes the shampoo more thorough, separates each hair from its neighbor, gives the shafts tone and resiliency. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar to a quart of warm water. After the shampoo hold the head over a washbowl and pour on the rinse. Pour on repeatedly by using a cup, or dip the head in the bowl. Finish with a tepid spraying.

* * *

Here is the recipe for a massage cream that is valuable in treatment of wrinkles: melt together ½-ounce of white wax, ½-ounce of spermaceti, 1 ounce of cocoanut oil, 1 ounce of lanolin, and 2 ounces of oil of sweet almonds; remove from heat, pour in 1 ounce of orange flower water to which a few drops of oil of lavender flowers have been added. Fluff with eggbeater until the consistency of whipped cream then pour into jars.

* * *

Deprive a woman of her powder pad, and she would be distraught. She flies to it on all occasions, before the arrival of the best feller, after a bawling spell, when she is happy, and when she isn't. Putting the dull finish on the feminine nose is a part of the business of being a girl. All right, explainable, and with no dire results unless the powder is too oily or too heavy and is ground into the pores with more vim and guesto than the rite demands. A light powdering is just as good, and even better.

Horoscopes

Sunday, April 26

Sunday's horoscope holds augury of a sudden swirl of events that may be productive of radical and far-reaching denouements. Wisely handled and with care as to writings and documents there may be unexpected advancement and great profit. Personal relations may not be entirely harmonious.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of decided chance, with the affairs complexioned by revolutionary and far-reaching influence. Unexpected advancement or financial profit may be accompanied by some personal friction. Sign all writings with precaution.

A child born on this day may be original, ingenious and ambitious and may attain to public position and prestige.

Monday, April 27

While this day is most encouraging for those in the employment of others, according to testimony of "the lights" in trine aspect, yet the afflicting place of Neptune, the subtle and secretive, may prove to be of sinister influence on the affairs. Great precaution against intrigue, fraud and sordidness is enjoined.

Those whose birthday it is, if in employment of others, may look for recognition or favors from those in authority, but generally there is a menace of a sinister and subtle force undermining the best interests.

A child born on this day may be disposed to be secretive, subtle and given to the peculiar and mysterious, but may attain responsible position in the favor of its employers.

"You can never teach an old dog new tricks!" So goes the old saw.

Dr. Copeland

People who do not chew their food properly constantly seek medical advice. Neglect of early training is responsible.

Their complaints generally are headaches, "biliousness" and constipation. The same advice is always given. "Chew your food carefully, eat slowly, do not rush your meals, relax after meals." But all to no avail. An old man, like an old dog, cannot be taught new tricks and certainly cannot be expected to forget his old habits.

Once a habit is established, the action becomes automatic. The time to develop and train habits is in childhood. This is particularly important in reference to the eating and chewing of food. Many adults dislike certain foods only because as children they never learned to acquire a taste for these foods.

Every infant and child, regardless of age should eat regularly. With regular eating there will be regular sleeping. These desirable practices can only be acquired by fixed habit. It is the duty of the mother to see that the children are nursed or fed at regular times each day.

Young children should be urged to chew their food. The habit of deliberate and thorough chewing of food should be taught in early life.

At the time of teething and when the baby's teeth have come through the gums, encourage chewing. Never let the baby forget to use the jaws and as he grows older he will do so automatically.

Children should not eat with adults. They should eat either before or after their elders. This plan permits the parents to eat undisturbed. It does away with the temptation of giving "tastes" of this and that to the youngsters.

Children are great mimics. If one of the parents has a dislike for a certain food the child is likely to develop this dislike. Frequently, such dislikes may be of important foods, such as milk, cereals or vegetables.

No infant should be permitted to have a taste of anything that is not included in its regular food schedule. This practice leads to a habit that is far easier to prevent than to correct.

Every habit established in youth will plague or bless the adult. The foundation of health and vigor are laid in early life.

Answers to Health Queries

MISS M. T. Q.—What would cause a numb feeling in the side of the face and what treatment would be helpful?

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

It's All a Matter of Showing Your Appreciation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When your escort takes you to his home the first time, what should you say when leaving?

2. When out with a young man friend, who should suggest going home first?

3. When at a dance and a young man asks for the next dance, what should the lady say?

4. If you have a friend come in and she brings you a box of candy, should it be opened before she leaves? M. R.

1. When you start to leave, you should say goodbye first to your friend's mother, or whoever is the hostess of the home in which you have been visiting. You do this before you go to get on your wraps. Tell your hostess what a "happy time" you had, how much you appreciated her hospitality, how appreciative you are of her invitation, or something of this kind, something that will show that you are an appreciative person.

Then say your goodbyes to your host, and to any other member of the family there is. Be sure to make them feel that you have enjoyed yourself, and that you are anticipating seeing them soon again.

2. Suggesting the hour of leaving is the privilege of the lady. The well-bred man waits for the lady to make this suggestion.

3. "Yes, thank you. I should love to," or words to that effect.

4. Not only before she leaves, but as she presents it to you. Open it at once, thanking her as you do this, and ask her if she will "have one." If you don't open it, she won't think that you are very enthusiastic about her bringing this kind present, and if you don't share them with her, she will think that you are a grasping soul!

Good Manners On-and-Off The Street Car

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly publish the correct way of entering and leaving a street car when with a gentleman? Does the lady step onto the car first?

Does the man walk ahead of the lady when getting off, and does he get off first and then help the lady off? Or does she walk ahead and get off and the gentleman follow her?

GRACE.

When a woman starts to leave a street car, the gentleman who is with her precedes her, both as she goes toward the entrance and as she steps from the car. He steps first from the car, and so is in position to assist her as she steps from the car. As they enter the car, he helps her to enter and then follows her into the car.

No Caviar on a Bean Budget

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In an institutional dining room where the menu does not cater to individual requirements, is it proper for those not pleased with the food to say so and remark on its appearance, quality and so forth while dining?

A few maintain that one is not ill-bred when one indulges in dining room dissertations on the food served, while others disagree.

Both factions will greatly appreciate your version of this.

J.

Such comments on the food in an institutional dining room are most inappropriate and ill-bred. Undoubtedly the restaurant must be run on a budget, and probably a very limited one at that, and this it is very difficult for a guest to understand. On a bean budget he usually wants caviar.

ORGY OF HOMERS MARKS LOCAL OPENER; HORNSBY HERO

The fans who attended the Pirates' home opening game at Forbes Field yesterday gazed upon a scene never before enacted in a major league baseball game in Pittsburgh, when Rogers Hornsby, playing manager of the Chicago Cubs, poled out three successive home runs and a single after being thrown out by the shortstop on his first appearance at the plate. All of this happened after Capt. Pie Traynor had a home run to the flag pole in the second inning. Hornsby's first circuit clout was over the left field fence, the second into the right field stands and the third over the scoreboard in left field. Photos show the order of homers, with the makers of them crossing the plate on each occasion. The three blows accounted for eight of the Cubs' 10 runs.

FIRST TO MAKE THREE HOMERS HERE

THOUGH THEY WERE denied the pleasure of seeing the Pirates win the first game of the home season, the fans in attendance at the delayed Forbes Field opener yesterday were privileged to witness the greatest exhibition of home-run hitting ever given by a single player in one game in this city. Rogers Hornsby did not equal the all-time record for consecutive four-basers, and he only tied the modern mark, which four other players tied last season, but he set a new record for Pittsburgh by being the first clouter ever to make three homers in a major league contest here. It was possible for even a Buccaneer rooter to get a thrill out of such remarkable batting.

Rogers Hornsby

Hornsby also broke his own record for home-run hitting, as it was the first time he ever made three round-trippers in a game, consecutively or otherwise. His achievement in knocking in eight runs fell four runs short of Jim Bottomley's major league mark.

THE MAJOR LEAGUE record of all time for home runs hit in succession is four, established by Bob Lowe, of the Boston Nationals, in the morning game of Memorial Day in 1894. Two of them came in one inning. Lowe made four home runs and a single in that game, a record that has never been beaten. On July 13, 1896, Ed Delehanty, of the Phillies, equaled the mark of four homers and a single in one game, but only three of his circuit clouts were made in succession.

Six other major league players besides Lowe and Delehanty previously were credited with the feat of three homers in a row, which Hornsby accomplished here yesterday. Cap Anson did it first for the Chicago Nationals on August 6, 1884, followed by Lowe (four) and Delehanty in 1894 and 1896, respectively; by George Kelly, of the Giants, in 1923, and by Carl Reynolds, of the White Sox; Earl Averill, of the Indians; Goose Goslin, of the Browns, and Mel Ott, of the Giants, in 1930.

HORNSBY MAY NOT be baseball's most popular figure in some quarters, but as a hitter he still ranks with the greatest the game ever produced. His homers yesterday were scattered with the mastery of a born batter who can hit anything thrown to him.

The first cleared the wall in left center at the seventh panel from the score board, the second dropped over the screen into the right field grandstand not far from the foul line, and the third went over the scoreboard in the left field corner. Rogers has made five home runs in the five games played so far between the Bucs and Cubs.

LOCAL FANS HAVE had too much experience to make the mistake of taking snap judgment on the Pirates after seeing them in only one game. Yesterday's opener told little about the club, as the defeat was due mainly to the once-in-a-lifetime hitting of an individual opponent, and there still is every reason to feel confident that the Bucs will eventually be right in the thick of the pennant fight. A right-hand pitcher with the same five-run lead might have obtained better results in yesterday's game. The fans were surprised that Manager Ens took another chance with a left-hander against a right-hand batting order when Remy Kremer and Glenn Spencer were available. The Cubs have beaten Larry French five times in succession and seven times in nine games since he broke into the National League.

Jim Mosolf

ANOTHER PIRATE CASUALTY was reported when Outfielder Adam Comorosky was added to the hospital list, but as far as that one game was concerned Commy wasn't missed, and the fans got a look at a highly acceptable substitute in the person of Jim Mosolf.

Mosolf's work was one of the bright spots of the afternoon from a Pittsburgh viewpoint. He tore off three hits, two of them against a left-hand pitcher, and played a game in left field that stamped him as a much improved gardener. Above all, he is fighting and hustling every minute.

MOSOLF'S FIRST HIT in the opening inning led to a mix-up over an old rule. Jim's shot, with the speed and direction to take it straight over second base, while Paul Waner was on third base and Pie Traynor on first, struck Umpire George Magerkurth, standing behind the pitcher, and bounded to Hornsby, who played it from second to first and claimed a double play, which Magerkurth allowed.

The teams were changing sides when Umpire Charley Moran decided that a rule had been overlooked and reversed Magerkurth's verdict. The regulations provide that if a fair hit ball strike the person or clothing of an umpire on fair ground before passing a fielder other than the pitcher, the batter shall be given a hit and no bases shall be run unless made necessary by the batter's becoming a baserunner.

GETTING BACK TO the real high spot of the day, Hornsby's sensational hitting, an anlysis shows rare resourcefulness and hitting versatility. The Rajah's first four-sacker off French was made on a screw ball. This offering is supposed to fade away from a right-hand batter, but apparently there was not much fade to the ball until it faded from view over the left-center fence. When Hornsby came up again, French and Hemsley decided to feed him a fast pitch. Rogers probably suspected a fast one on the outside corner, for he stepped close to the plate as he drove the sphere into the right-field stand. The Cub pilot found Willoughby on the slab when he next came up. The former Philly pitcher dusted off the great hitter, who paid little or no heed to two close pitches.

KREMER TO OPPOSE BRUINS

BERG STOPPED BY CANZONERI IN THIRD

CHICAGO, April 25.—(AP.)—The lightweight championship of the world remains safely in America.

Tony Canzoneri, the titleholder, repulsed the attempt of Jack (Kid) Berg, Great Britain's foremost challenger, to wrest the title from him last night by knocking him out in the third round of their scheduled 10-round battle fought before a disappointing crowd of 11,780 in the Chicago Stadium.

Canzoneri, a short-ender in the 7-to-5 betting, was complete master of the Briton. He won the first two rounds easily and battered Berg to defeat in the third without being in the slightest danger himself. Berg, however, outclassed, courageously fought back, and his own aggressive efforts leaving himself open for a knockout blow, resulted in his defeat.

The knockout was dramatic.

END COMES EARLY

They were whaling away at each other in a neutral corner, when Canzoneri suddenly stepped back. Then with a cunning of an animal, smashed over a sharp right cross that landed flush on Berg's chin.

The Briton's legs flew from under him and he rolled over on his back. There he remained while the count was being tolled over him. As the timekeeper tolled out seven, Berg gamely tried to struggle to his feet. He succeeded, but his legs would not support him. After standing there for a second with his legs wabbling under him, he fell over, his body sliding down the ropes of the ring. He fell heavily to the floor and the referee, Little Phil Collins, immediately rushed over to Canzoneri, raising his hand in victory.

The courageous little British fighter, who had not been defeated in 26 battles, was crushed and heartbroken over his loss. After his seconds dragged him to his corner and restored him to his senses, Berg broke down and cried. Meanwhile, Canzoneri was jumping around the ring like a jumpingjack, delirious in victory. Then he suddenly thought of Berg. He rushed over to shake the hand of the defeated Briton.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY; "NUB" GOFF MADE ALL THREE OUTS IN ONE INNING—During a baseball game between Enterprise, Ala., and Newton, Ala., in the year 1922, Nub Goff, who was a one-armed pitcher, was retired three times in one inning. All of the other batsmen scored. The game was called at the end of the fourth inning, the score standing 29 to 0 in favor of Enterprise. A similar instance on record is that of Phil Wolf, on an amateur team in Pomeroy, O., who struck out three times in the ninth inning. He was first up and fanned. The entire team batted around the lineup twice, scoring 16 runs in one inning.

RAJAH'S THREE HOMERS BEAT BUCS, 10-6

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Rogers Hornsby, of Fort Worth, Tex., never went to college, but Pittsburgh's famed center of culture and learning, including 15,000 home folks, were still groggy this morning after having sat in on a gripping outdoor lecture given by this unusual son of the backlots, whose only diploma is a gilt-edged paper calling for approximately $40,000 per season.

Aside from beautiful rhythm, perfect co-ordination, natural brightness, confidence, easy poise and a Louisville Slugger bat, Hornsby had no credits with which to crash the classic gates of the refined Schenley Park district yesterday afternoon, but he used these gifts in a becoming manner as he sank the Pirate ship in the home opener at Forbes Field. The leader of the rollicking Cubs, of Chicago, astounded the multitude with three dramatic homers that were good for eight runs and the Bears won, 10 to 6.

KREMER TO HURL

So naturally, the Bucs were considerably stunned today as they gathered at their lockers in anticipation of the second and last game of what started out to be a four-game series. Manager Ens will send Remy Kremer out to face the Bears while Manager Hornsby is likely to call upon Altoona Pat Malone.

Hornsby's prodigious batting feat will stay in the memory of all who saw it. The great batsman connected for three homers in succession in the third, fifth and sixth innings and he came into his new fame by hitting the ball to widely-scattered points.

The Rajah faced Larry French in the third with Les Sweetland and Woodie English on the sacks. The resultant four-sacker was a drive over the left-center fence. French was still on Fogarty Knoll in the fifth when Hornsby came to the plate with Cuyler and English awaiting advance. This time he

MAJOR HITTERS LAY DOWN HOMER BARRAGE

Carnegie Tech, Western Reserve Open Track Season With Meet Today

CIRCUIT CLOUTS AID ROBINS, ATHLETICS

Associated Press.

The major league pitchers have generally held the upper hand over the batters so far this season, but in one fell swat the boys have shown that the new dead ball is not so dead that it can't be hit hard and far.

Nine major league games yesterday produced 15 home runs, well distributed among the competing teams and plenty of additional extra base swats. Rogers Hornsby, sturdy manager of the Chicago Cubs, alone exploded the yarn that the thicker cover and raised stems of the pellet used in the National League could offset the power gained through the consumption of "them steaks."

RAJAH CLOUTS THREE

The Rajah, never much of a distance hitter a few years ago until he began adding beef to his frame, clouted three home runs in succession to play the leading role in his team's 10-6 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

With one single to boot, these three homers accounted for eight runs and tied the modern major league record for homers in one game. The all-time mark is four, made by Bob Lowe and Ed Delehanty back in the 90's.

The home run hitting was distributed among nine clubs. The three by Hornsby and two by Glenn Wright, of Brooklyn, gave the National League, with the supposedly deader ball, a 9-6 margin in the number hit. Wright's swats, one homer by Del Bissonette and some fine pitching by Watson Clark enabled the Robins to win their second game of the season, defeating the Boston Braves, 6 to 1.

The Phillies and New York Giants put the first tie game of the season on record as darkness halted their clash after 12 innings with the score 7 to 7. Kept idle again by the weather, the St. Louis Cardinals heard good news when Chick Hafey agreed to terms, and bad when it was learned an injury will keep Taylor Douthit out a week or more.

SIMMONS STARS

Al Simmons, whose failure to hit has retarded the progress of the Philadelphia Athletics, broke loose to show the American League how to clout the ball. After admitting that hits were unusually hard to get this year, Simmons connected for a homer and two triples to lead the A's to a 10-7 victory over Washington.

Red Ruffing combined pitching and hitting as the Ruth-less Yankees trounced the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 4.

Pitching alone still held sway in the two western games of the American League. Earl Whitehill gave the St. Louis Browns five hits, two of them homers, in a mound duel against Sammy Gray, Detroit winning, 4 to 2. Willis Hudlin, of Cleveland, pitched a four-hit shutout against Chicago for eight innings and let up in the ninth to gain an 8-to-1 triumph.

DALY DENIES SEEKING ZINN

By TOM BIRKS

Manager Hank Daly, of the Homewood club of the City League, denied today that the club had been dickering with Earl Zinn, of Butler, to pitch for the East Enders.

"We have definite ideas regarding the pitchers we want this season," Daly said. "Zinn will not be with the club."

Daly, however, refused to commit himself regarding who will take Brinker's place on the Homewood firing line. Rumor has it that a pitcher with another club in the City League last season will be wearing a Homewood uniform when the bell rings.

New Castle Wins Spring Grid Till

NEW CASTLE, Pa., April 25.—New Castle High defeated Erie Academy, 14 to 6, here last night in their annual spring football contest.

More than 3,000 fans turned out and were rewarded with a splendid exhibition. The Uram brothers scored for the home team in the second quarter, while Mazza galloped across the line for Erie's lone touchdown.

ST. VINCENT'S OPENS

LATROBE, Pa., April 25.—St. Vincent's baseball season gets under way today as the Bearcats tangle with the Wilkinsburg club on the St. Vincent's diamond. The Bearcats are primed for the opener and Coach Jerome feels confident that his team will land an easy victory. Creed Westfall, ace righthander of the Bearcats staff, will draw the opening mound assignment.

Extra fine pitching has advanced Peabody High School's entry in the City League baseball chase another notch, and may be the factor that eventually decides the Section 1 title.

Yesterday, Peabody defeated Schenley in an 11-inning game, 3 to 2, mainly because of the fine hurling of Lefty Masters. Masters limited Schenley to seven hits, which he kept well scattered, and he fanned 13 of the Bellefield hitters. On Tuesday, Martin, another Peabody hurler, turned in a no-run, no-hit game against Connelley.

PEABODY SECOND

The triumph for Peabody yesterday placed the team in second place and shoved Schenley down into third. Westinghouse, however, continued to win, battering out a 7-to-4 win over Connelley.

In Section II, Oliver continued its great pace, defeating the formidable South Hills entry, 14 to 7, and winning its fourth game in as many starts. Langley upset Allegheny, 4 to 3, in the big upset of the day and Carrick defeated Vocational, 7 to 1, to bring about a four-way tie for second place in the section.

In the Peabody-Schenley game, Earl Stratton, Schenley's clever righthander, also hurled fine ball, fanning 18 batters and giving up but seven safe hits.

BAXTER WALLOPED

Washington Traders and Latimer turned in triumphs in Junior division contests yesterday. Washington won over Baxter, 28 to 4, in a slugging bee and Latimer defeated Gladstone, 8 to 6. Liberty downed Herron Hill, 11 to 7, in a third Junior tussle.

In the W. P. I. A. L., McKees Rocks won its third game in as many attempts by downing Crafton, 8 to 2. Reiss, Rox hurler, turned Crafton back with four safe hits. His mates collected 15.

Rankin won over the Duke Preps in a non-league affair, 4 to 2, and Edgewood nosed out Shady Side, 6 to 5.

LEVINSKY SEES KAYO WIN

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

With King Levinsky on the scene, having arrived yesterday, the stage is set for Motor Square Garden's heavyweight boxing show next Monday night. The King will work out this afternoon, after having attended the baseball opening game yesterday to see his home-town Cubs and Manager Rogers Hornsby do their stuff at the expense of our Pirates. He arrived yesterday morning from Boston, with his sister-manager, Mrs. Lena Levy.

Levinsky is a tough puncher, but not much of a boxer. He expects to be able to flatten his opponent, Emmett Rocco, Ellwood City Italian, with his righthand smashes. He has met men of greater reputation than Rocco, including Tommy Loughran, Jimmy Slattery, Leo Lomski, Tuffy Griffiths and others.

Rocco is doing his training at home. He is accustomed to coming here the underdog and winning and confidently expects to repeat on Monday night.

Harry Williams and Buddy McArthur are paired for the eight-round semi-final. Lloyd Clements and Russell Powers are in the second bout, and Carl Montebano and Anson Green in the opener.

Between Rounds

Jack Tracey, local Negro middleweight, will box Jimmy Guthrie, of Akron, in the 10-round main bout of a show at East Liverpool, O., tonight. Frankie Porto and Kenny Davis are in the semi-final.

Johnny Warner, of Clairton, and Johnny Hagerty, of Lawrenceville, are in the semi-final to the Ike McFowler-Jack DeMave bout at Johnstown Tuesday night.

Phil Raymond, hard-hitting Baltimore lightweight, wants to box Eddie Brannon, local Negro, here, according to the former's manager, Heine Blaustein, of Baltimore.

BERG STOPPED BY Cchamp

and Berg cut loose with another flood of tears.

WINS ADDED TITLE

Canzoneri was so happy with his triumph that big tears welled into his eyes when Gen. John V. Clinnin, president of the National Boxing Association and chairman of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, presented him with a diamond-studded belt, emblematic of the lightweight championship of the world. By his victory, Canzoneri also becomes junior-welterweight champion of the world, as Berg's title was at stake, as well as Canzoneri's. They both made the required lightweight limit of 135 pounds easily.

HERRERA WINS

In the eight-round semi-final, Tony Herrera, of El Paso and Chicago, defeated Steve Halaiko, of Rochester, N. Y., in a slow bout. The battle lacked aggressive action.

Ed Steeve, of the University of Illinois, defeated Mickey Patrick, of Chicago, in the four-round opener. In the second bout, Natie Brown, of San Francisco, knocked out Joe Doktors, of Buffalo, in the second round. Barney Ross, of Chicago, knocked out Lud Abella, of Madrid, Spain, in the second round of the scheduled eight-round bout and Harry Dublinsky defeated Roger Bernard in eight rounds.

RECORD SET, MISSED BY BERLINGER

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—(AP.)—Before Barney Berlinger settles down in business with his father, a Philadelphia manufacturer and banker, he hopes to fulfill two ambitions — win the Olympic decathlon championship at Los Angeles in 1932 and, at the same time establish a new world's record in this all-around athletic test of brawn and skill.

The captain of the University of Pennsylvania track and field team shattered his own record for the second straight year in the Penn relay carnival yesterday.

NEAR RECORD

This one-man track team had the American decathlon record in his grasp and the world's record in sight when he slumped toward the finish of yesterday's 10-event grind. A series of minor bad breaks was climaxed by poor takeoffs that prevented him from clearing more than 12 feet in the pole vault, an event in which he never has failed to do 12 feet, 6 inches, and frequently cleared 13 feet.

This setback convinced him it was not his day, and he jogged through the 1500-meter run, the final event, finishing a poor last in a field of six. As it was, he set a new carnival record of 7735.6135 points.

Barney won five of the 10 events, but was short of his best marks in the pole vault, high jump, 100-meter dash and 110-meter hurdles.

PANTHER, TARTAN DO WELL

Pittsburgh entries fared well, Everett Utterback, Pitt captain, winning the hop, step and jump, and Tom Coulter, Carnegie Tech's one-man team, finishing second to Beatty, of Michigan Normal, in the final of the 400-meter hurdles.

Utterback leaped 45 feet 4 3/8 inches to win over Green, of Army, his closest rival. Coulter trailed Beatty to the tape by three yards.

Mercersburg Academy sprint team which has held the 440-yards relay title for several years was dethroned by New Utrecht, of New York, in the final of the event, which was won in 44 4-10 seconds.

O. S. U. RUNNERS STAR

Ohio State's runners faced today's final program of relay championships with an edge over the rest of the big eastern and midwestern field. The Buckeyes lifted the quarter-mile sprint medley and relay crowns from Chicago, beating a crack Navy quartet in a thrilling finish for the sprint medley title in carnival record time of 3:27.6.

Jack Keller, Ohio hurdler, raced to a new carnival mark of 14.7 seconds in the 120-yard high hurdles.

TWO MARKS FALL

DES MOINES, Ia., April 25.—(AP.)—Two new meet records emerged from a day of drizzling rain and cold which held most of the great field of competitors in the Drake relays yesterday to below-par performances.

Hugh Rhea, the burly shotputter from Nebraska, and four husky medley relay runners from Iowa State were the only entrants to better previous marks.

The cyclone medley team of Nagel, Henderson, La Bertew and Putnam led a wholesale revolt against the supremacy of Marquette in that event, winning in record time of 10:21.6. Marquette, a poor fifth, set the mark last year at 10:23.7.

Rhea's heave of 49 feet 7 inches was nearly five feet better than that of his nearest rival, Sam Behr, of Wisconsin, in the shotput trials. The old record, made by Jim Bausch, of Kansas, last year, was 4½ inches under Rhea's mark.

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—The ball season is only 10 days old and already Babe Ruth's legs have become more important than Marlene Dietrich's. The Babe's stems are not quite so pretty to gaze at, but it's those limbs that will either make the Yankees a super-feature or a two-reel comedy. I could tell how bad off Ruth is if I only got a line on his appetite. If Babe is eating pigs knuckles smothered in strawberries for dessert and topping it off with a bucket of coffee, you will know he is normal. That guy isn't really sick until you can load his average meal on one tray.

KREMER SET FOR BRUINS

drove the ball into the rightfield stands. Claude Willoughby was working in the sixth and Cuyler was on ahead when Hornsby drove the rocket high over the scoreboard and leftfield fence.

PIE HITS ONE

A thrilling homer by Pie Traynor that had the merit of three runs and which looked like the big heroics of the afternoon, lost its sweetness after Hornsby began to step out. The Buccos scored twice in the first round and when Pie belted his three-run homer to center in the second round, the Freebooters were out in front with a five-run lead. Things began to happen soon after the Traynor wallop and French eventually left the scene a battered and beaten sharpshooter.

The spectacle probably convinced Manager Ens it is unwise to use lefthand pitchers against the cannonading Cubs. Hornsby has eight righthand batters ready to crown every southpaw that steps to the slab and that is usually what comes to pass.

The first inning of the inaugural saw a confusing number that caused a wild commotion. With P. Waner on third and Capt. Traynor on first and one out, Jim Mosolf, subbing for Adam Comorosky, who is sick, drove a hard wallop through the box that was headed for centerfield. Umpire George Magerkurth, operating behind the pitcher, was in line with the smash, the rocket hitting one of his legs. The sphere deflected straight into the hands of Hornsby, who went through the actions of a double play, which, if allowed, would have retired the side

MORAN CHANGES

Magerkurth called both runners out and the Cubs rushed to their dugout. The Buccos kicked up such a furore that Umpire-in-Chief Charley Moran checked up his mate and discovered an error had been made. The situation called for a "dead-ball" ruling with all three runners safe on the sacks.

Sheriff Fred Blake, of West Virginia, was opposed to French at the outset, but Traynor's round-tripper with two on in the second took the Sheriff away in favor of Sweetland, who stayed around to the finish. Sweetland did a fine job of relief twirling and he kicked in with three hits, including a triple.

Comorosky's absence from the lineup is indefinite. The leftfielder is suffering with a throat ailment. But the team is well fortified in the garden with Jim Mosolf performing like a star. The big boy made a fine impression yesterday; he fielded well and clicked off three hits.

Long's Sport Comment

Perhaps he figured the Pirate flinger would come through with a curve after wasting two. Anyhow he timed what proved to be a hook and the ball took a long ride over the scoreboard. Thus, the three homers were made on three different kinds of pitches.

REMEMBER THE SWARM of holdout cases a couple of months ago, in which the clubowners vowed they would never yield an inch or a dollar and the players declared they would retire and go into some other business if their demands were not granted? Count them now.

The last case of the kind did a fade-out yesterday, when Chick Hafey, facing a suspension under the rules if not in line 10 days after the season opening, came to terms with the Cardinal bosses. It's the same old ending to the same old story. They're all back in due time.

Jack (Kid) Berg

YOU MAY HAVE seen a wrestler performing in his bare feet here recently, but the A. A. U. national championship glove tournament in New York next week will present the novelty of a boxer appearing in the same rather informal style.

He is Benny (Flash) Akahuela, one of the six members of the Hawaiian team. Akahuela, who also plays football in his bare feet, says shoes only impede speed. He is a lightweight.

IT'S ONE THING to be champion of your own natural boxing division, but it's quite another thing to pull yourself down to a lighter class and try to take the title from the leader of that brigade. Even such a remarkable fighter as Jack (Kid) Berg, an 8-to-5 favorite, couldn't get away with it, his attempt to wrest the lightweight crown from Tony Canzoneri in Chicago last night resulting in Berg's being knocked out in the third round. With all due credit to Canzoneri for his achievement, the fact that this is only his third hayo victory since 1928, that Berg had beaten him 15 months earlier, and that a technical knockout at the hands of Billy Petrolle marked the only time Berg had ever been stopped before appears to indicate that making the low weight was a factor in Berg's defeat.

SKIBO STARS TO ASSAULT RECORDS

By JESS CARVER

The official intercollegiate track and field campaign will be escorted onto the local stage here this afternoon by the varsity squads of Carengie Tech and Western Reserve University, of Cleveland, as they clash in a dual meet in the Tartan Bowl.

As an added, or supporting attraction, the Tartan Plebes and Turtle Creek Union High will indulge in a tussle simultaneous with the varsity encounter.

What with Rog Hornsby dropping home runs impartially about the Oakland district, and the Tartan and Red Cat weight stars heaving javelins and shots and what ever is plural for the discus, that sector will not be a particularly healthy spot for the common, or garden variety of citizens today. It is a question whether one would rather be crowned with one of Hornsby's home run socks or a discus propelled by Johnny Karcis.

MARKS MAY FALL

Last week, the Skibos took over the P. A. A. squad in a very satisfactory manner. During the afternoon, three or four school and track records were shattered. Today, the gents who broke marks last week figure to improve on them. The marks that appear to be in the greatest danger are the discus, hammer, shot, 450-yard run and hurdles.

In the timber-topping, Tom Coulter, of Carnegie, who ran second in the 440-yard high hurdles in the Penn relays yesterday, will compete. Coulter hurdled a Pullman last night after completing his running at Franklin Field and arrived back in the home port this morning.

Pitt's track captain, Everette Utterback, who holds the national intercollegiate indoor record and championship in the broad jump, carried off first place in the hop, step and jump at Penn yesterday. Today he'll run on a couple of relay teams and take a crack at the broad jump.

PITT NETTERS WIN

Other tri-state district relay teams and individuals from West Virginia, Geneva, Pitt, Shady Side Academy and Kiski, will compete in the relay carnival today.

Pitt's varsity tennis team, which yesterday walloped Bethany for the second time in a week, meets Wash-Jeff's varsity racquet wielders at Washington this afternoon. Yesterday the Panther netters defeated the Bisons, 9-0, after having trounced 'em here one week ago, 7-0. The summary:

SINGLES

Jacobs (Pitt) defeated Dallas, 6-1, 6-0.
Cohen (Pitt) defeated Cowdery, 1-6, 7-5, 7-5.
Goodman (Pitt) defeated Beckman, 6-3, 6-3.

PITT GOLFERS LOSE

WASHINGTON, April 25. — George Washington University golf team defeated the University of Pittsburgh, 3 to 1, here yesterday in the opening match of the season for the visitors.

Sam Parks, Jr., captain and coach of the Panther shot-makers, snared the only point credited to his team by defeating John Shorley, captain of the local quartet, 2 and 1.

The Pitt captain stroked the first nine in 38, but found Shorley right at his side to make the turn all even. On the back nine Parks' 37 was too much for the Washington captain, who consumed 10 to drop the only match charged to his team.

Today the Pittsburghers will play Georgetown University at the Manor Club course. Yesterday's cards:

QUARTET IN NEW BROADCAST TONIGHT

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Frank Weis and his Red Arrow Quartet score another hit tonight by giving for the first time outside New York the wonderful arrangement of Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Sharp Minor," as improvised by Frank Black of The Travelers. This is a special feature of the 11:15 concert on KDKA. We salute Mr. Weis and his diligent workers for giving Pittsburgh radio some of the most brilliant arrangements of popular and classical songs. Before departing a downtown theater this week, Ted Lewis invited us to hear his arrangement of "Little Church In the Valley," which he produces on WCAE at 7:30 tonight. We liked it. Other outstanding things on the air include Walter Damroch's playing of "Hawaiian Suite" (WCAE at 9) and the beautiful, soothing reading poem to the accompaniment of appropriate music, KDKA at 10:45.

Moke: "Why do they put roosters instead of hens on weather vanes?"

Riggs: "I know. Because it would be too much work to climb on top of the barn to collect the eggs."

It was late Saturday night that we tuned in on WABC accidentally and heard the Cumberland Ridge Runners at 9 o'clock. We thought they were exceptionally good. Hear them on WJAS tonight doing a song that Abraham Lincoln wrote. He called it "Adam's Mate." They will sing also the emancipator's favorite hymn, "At the Cross."

THE "GANG OF GANGS"—six boys and six girls at Manor, Pa.—make us feel happy with their opinion of Ben Bernie, "The Old Mastro."

BY THE WAY, they ask, has anyone heard Bernie pronounce "radio" the Al Smith way and then whisper into the mike:

"Well, go ahead laugh, you Republicans."

SHE KNEW DAVE Rubinoff when he directed an orchestra in a small Minneapolis theater, pens Miss L. M. C., of 5514 Center avenue, East End. Lucille Wall, the love story girl on the "Magazine Hour," played stock in Des Moines, Ia., when Miss L. M. C. sang over WHO. She remembers also when Little Jack Little and Paul Small traveled together. That's been quite a while ... but having had such marvelous company, you must be good yourself, Miss L. M. C. Why not sing for us over a Pittsburgh station some time?

A DOWNTOWN DRUG store has named a sundae "Little Jack Little."

MRS. J. W., 321 Electric avenue, East Pittsburgh, says Lew Conrad has a slight edge on Rudy Vallee ... double check!

NOW'S A GOOD time to inaugurate a midnight frolic program over some Pittsburgh station and keep it going for the winter months, advises WCS. Yes, we should have more late programs...and some sort of a nutty club . . . we have mentioned it to the stations . . .

ALSO WE SHOULD have in Pittsburgh a radio club similar to the Press Club for newspapermen ...where artists, announcers and listeners might gather for social good times...that's also on the fire . . .

HOMER RODEHEAVER'S poem and song service is clicking on the network . . . our Mother copied this piece of his philosophy the other day and suggested that we pass it on to readers:

"When you are angry
Pretend you are a bird;
Just SING
And don't say a word!"

HUNDREDS VISIT STUDIOS

Hundreds of people took advantage of an opportunity to visit Pittsburgh radio studios yesterday at the invitation of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. "Open house" continues today at all studios as a feature of "Hospitality Day." An added attraction was scheduled last night when KDKA officials agreed to extend their Saxonburg invitation to include Sunday. If you wish to see the world's most powerful broadcasting station, at Saxonburg, Pa., obtain a courtesy card at the main office of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, on Bigelow boulevard, or at the classified ad office, Fifth avenue and Market street. Roads to Saxonburg are in good shape, and the trip will make a nice Sunday afternoon drive. KDKA has assigned a special guide to conduct visitors through the plant. He will be glad to answer any questions.

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, April 25.—It has remained for a southern university, Oglethorpe, to be the first to assign radio broadcasting to the plane of higher learning. Other colleges will undoubtedly fall in line, though it is likely most of them will wait until television occupies the throne of American amusements.

Oglethorpe, so far as we know, has produced no radio crooners. No jazz bands have strutted from its campus to the salons of the broadcasters. It has sponsored no programs, sent none of its teaching staff to the diving boards of the radio sea. Yet she intends to give full academic credit to those of her students who cup their ears attentively and can tell on paper tersely and accurately—and we hope, critically—what they hear.

* * *

It has been our feeble notion for months that the phenomenal rise of moony crooners in the republic would sooner or later make colleges radio-conscious. So radio-conscious, in fact, that chairs in crooning would have to be established if the faculties hopec to maintain their enrollments.

* * *

More than any other line of activity, radio has depleted the college dormitories. And the blame, or the credit must, in the final analysis, be placed at the gilded door of Rudy Vallee. With his hymns to Yale and his hosannas to Maine, Vallee set an example that was devastating to every campus in America. Well, every campus, that is save Harvard's.

With a moon-drenched megaphone, he sang to lonely and restless women and the republic was soon his oyster. His greenbacks turned to yellow, and they poured into his pockets in a gushing torrent.

* * *

The effect was to make every college boy in the land who had any claim to musical talent yearn to be another Rudy of the Vallee. Students spurned old time ambitions and temptations. Bond selling no longer had an appeal. Nor did the peddling of aluminumware from house-to-house. Even a desire to be an athletic coach was left exclusively to the boys of Notre Dame.

A group of saxophones, a megaphone and a voice crying in the radio wilderness—that became the goal of higher learning in Americ

* * *

Before you knew it, before Dr. Irving Fisher could finish his "Short Stories on Wealth," crooners were swarming from the colleges to the radio studios.

The maharajahs who guided the destinies of broadcasting made them welcome, gave them trials on their schedules, signed them to dotted lines, ballyhooed them from the housetops.

Wise boys, the maharajahs! They knew that a personable college boy, with youth and romance on his side, could penetrate a parlor that would give neither an ear nor a sigh to hardboiled babies from the professional show world.

* * *

Whether the addition of broadcasting to the curricula will halt the march of tear-stained tenors is difficult to say. Our own belief is that it will. Our own belief, if you are craving to know, is that boys who might be disposed to speed with saxophones and alma mater chants to radio studios will now remain to learn of other activities in broadcasting besides crooning.

For they will be told that the crooning army is overrecruited and that an ability to talk is far more profitable in radio in the long run.

* * *

They will learn that radio wants—and wants badly—more Amoses and Andys, Floyd Gibbonses, more Lowell Thomases, more Will Rodgerses, more McNamees, more Kaltenborns and Philip Lords. And it may—who knows?—that Oglethorpe will develop them.

The exhibit was inaugurated by a military parade by the R. O. T. C., on the campus. A recital by the department of music followed, and the school drama presented "Macbeth" in the College of Fine Arts Theater. A fashion show was presented by students of the Margaret Morrison College.

PURE STREAMS LAWS URGED

The need for legislation to support the State Sanitary Water Board in its efforts to purify the streams of the state was urged at an open forum held yesterday in the quarters of the Civic Club of Allegheny County. The forum was part of the club's Hospitality Day program.

William E. Armstrong, president of the Allegheny County Association of Townships, one of the speakers, declared that the board can purify the streams within five years if they get legislation which will provide aid from the state in financing proper sewage disposal in townships and boroughs which are unable to pay the costs.

Armstrong and other speakers urged support of the Mansfield and Harris bills now pending before the Legislature, which would classify and, in the case of the Mansfield bill, extend the powers of the Sanitary Water Board.

THE SECRET SIX -:- By Frances Marion

Member of Scorpio Gang Is Elected Mayor

CHAPTER XV.

A sensational melodramatic story of the underworld, adapted from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer-Cosmopolitan picture.

Scorpio returned to the steak house, to receive the wildest welcome any man had ever been given in Centro.

Peaches greeted him with smiles, as he made triumphal progress through the restaurant to the office beyond.

The Gouger, delighted, informed the crowds that "Slaughterhouse won out! The jury did the square thing!"

In the office, Scorpio faced a dozen hard-eyed men—chosen mobsmen of the organization.

"I'm sorry they wouldn't let me out of prison to go to Johnny's funeral," he remarked to Mike, the Duck. Mike had handled the details of that ornate function.

Gang War Started

"Was the flowers I sent all right?"

"They sure was swell. And the casket you paid for—with that plate—'To Johnny Franks from his dear old Pal Scorpio'—you know it made a lotta chumps cry."

Scorpio nodded, satisfied.

Drinks were passed—to all but Scorpio, who, as usual drank his milk.

"Here's to Scorpio," toasted Newton. The men drank deep.

"Speech! Speech!" shouted one of the gangsters, and others took up the cry.

"Aw, hell," protested Scorpio. "I don't know what to say to a bunch of you guys."

He hesitated.

Newton flashed him a glance that said plainly as words—"On your feet. Hands on the reins!"

Scorpio rose, and looked about the room.

"This here is a great honor—and one you guys will never regret," he began. The sound of his own voice, and the silent attention of the men encouraged him. He swelled with pride that adulation can give. He expanded almost visibly.

"I've got great plans for you," he announced ponderously. "Plans that are going to take us on the up and up! They're going to make the fortunes for us.

"Thousands—no—millions! If you've got the guts—there ain't nothin' to stop us!"

The gangsters applauded.

A noise at the door drew his eyes away from his auditors.

Peaches had opened it a trifle, and, through the narrow slit, was watching him.

Scorpio's face glowed with a smile—"as I was saying, pals—when me and you—" Peaches closed the door and vanished.

The next day gang-war wracked Centro and the city.

Colimo's gang struck first.

Several men were killed by the bodyguard thrown about Scorpio.

The Scorpio gang struck back, hijaked Colimo's launches, and left several Colimo men dead in the river.

Merchants in the city began to pay tribute to two sets of racketeers as Colimo and Scorpio both levied upon them. Colimo's racketeers tried, in turn, to "muscle in" on Centro.

The police confessed themselves powerless.

Such was the situation when Markham called together the six men he had banded in his plan for a crusade.

They met in the top floor of a great office building, in a secret headquarters, especially designed. There was one entrance, from a private elevator built to run into a locked office two floors below. With them was Donlan.

Two Meetings

"The chief of police," stated Markham, "can't handle the situation. I know he's been taking money. We have to have a man we know—and can trust. Donlan—will you take leave of absence from the government, and take the job?"

Donlan nodded.

"We'll put the jam on the city council tomorrow, and get the appointment through before the gangsters know it," stated Markham.

Almost at the same time, another meeting was being held. This one was in Scorpio's office in Centro. Now, fully established as the ruler of the gang, he conferred with Newton, the Gouger, and their lieutenants.

"We have to get a grip on this town now," Newton tersely stated, "and that means we've got to get ready for the November elections."

"From now on, call the Gouger Mr. Nick Misoski—never let 'Gouger' be heard again. We'll spread around that he was a cowboy from the West, a sturdy Westerner who came here to earn an honest living in the packing houses; how he is a leader of the laboring men in their fight for better conditions, and all that sort of thing."

"What the hell!" demanded the Gouger.

"Shut up, Misoski," snapped Scorpio. "You dumb egg, keep your shirt on."

"We're going to elect you mayor of Centro!"

The Gouger never knew exactly what was happening to him in the hectic months that followed Scorpio's announcement that he was to be the next mayor of Centro. He obeyed, unhesitatingly, of course, when he was costumed for the part with a broad hat and a pair of western boots—and even managed to try to talk with a western dialect. Scorpio and Newton didn't pay much attention to him—they were too busy, organizing, holding secret conferences, and organizing some more.

Election Activity

Organization was comparatively simple. Citizens who espoused the cause of John W. Carson, the reform candidate, a stationery merchant who had promised to "clean up" Centro, were conferred with—usually on dark nights—by a moral suasion committee from the Scorpio gang. And when they woke up in the Emergency Hospital they weren't so active politically, as a rule.

Two days before election, the opposing factions were at the height of their battle. The reform element had rolled up a strong "silent vote" that the Scorpio gang knew was there, but could not definitely locate.

"We even registered a lot of birds who are in the cemetery," one reported to Newton. Newton grinned. "Old trick—but always good," he commented.

Outside a band blared from a truck decorated with blatant Misoski banners. Below, in the steak house, sounds of revelry arose.

"Just what do you think our chances are," Scorpio demanded of Newton, as reports from the different workers were digested.

"Not bad," replied Newton. "You have tremendous odds against you, of course. The businessmen and the newspapers are supporting the opposition, even though we have the businessmen afraid to make too much noise. There's that silent vote I talked about—you can't really gauge or trace it. But we have more money and know mob psychology better than they do. Our hope lies with the masses."

Scorpio pondered on this. He didn't exactly understand.

"I think I can swing the stockyards gang, anyhow," he said. "I'll catch them coming out of the yards tomorrow—we'll have a truckload of presents—candy and booze, and such like, at every gate—free smokes, and I'll make a speech—you got to write it, of course.

"Good," rejoined Newton. "If we can swing the South End and the stockyards we can probably win out."

In another office, in the big city, another meeting was being held. The six grave faced business men were meeting in their secret office.

"You mustn't underestimate the importance of that election in Centro," Markham was warning the group. "If the Scorpio gang elects its ticket, that means it has a perfect stronghold—even to police protection—from which to invade the city. And the gang's growing so big and powerful that it's sure to be the result. Even now in the underworld, my reporters tell me, Scorpio is considered a bigger man than Colimo, even though he hasn't really invaded us yet."

Donlan nodded.

"Either Scorpio and Colimo will get together—or there's going to be one hell of a big gang war after that election," he stated. "And we'll have to get some kind of action for our own protection. You know—in San Francisco they used to form vigilance committees of citizens to clean out nests of crooks. I have 200 lieutenants out now, organizing. I don't like to admit the police may fall down—but I'm playing safe. And another thing—the gangsters have some sort of wind about us—I hear references to 'The Secret Six' here and there. I'm trying to trace that down now."

Misoski Elected

Scorpio's campaign in the stockyards was a grand success.

Election day saw several hundred taxis and private autos, commandeered by the Scorpio gang, hauling his voters to the polls. The reform element looked grave.

That night, in Scorpio's headquarters, the gang leaders and their candidate waited anxiously. From the radio droned the returns. The reform ticket piled up heavy votes in the residence sections, until the Misoski ticket was snowed under by several thousand votes.

"We're sunk! We'll have to lie low when that reform crowd gets in!" wailed Scorpio.

"Wait," warned Newton. "The stockyards and South End haven't been heard from yet."

They did not have to wait long. A few more desultory returns came in—there was a pause, and from the radio came this—

"Returns from the South End are now in. We regret to inform you that the next mayor of Centro is Nick Misoski—a bootlegger and a gunman!"

"Don't I know it?" agreed his son, John, Jr.

"Well."

"Not so well," Jack Pillsbury admitted, "Marjorie isn't keen for it."

"You want to marry her, don't you?"

"Goes without saying, Governor—I'd almost be willing to marry her if she wasn't coming into all that Watkins dough."

"Dough? Is that——"

"Sure, it's a good word. It means kale, gelt—money."

"Money is a better word. Marjorie doesn't seem to care for the silly idioms used so freely by most of her acquaintances."

"That's Oke—I mean, perhaps you are right. But all this doesn't alter the fact that thus far Marjorie seems to know her mind to the extent of sweetly but firmly turning down my proposals."

John Pillsbury was troubled over this. He was Marjorie Watkins' legal guardian. He had been executor of the immense estate left to her. He was really fond of her, and it was quite natural that he would be most happy to see his son married to her.

To give Jack Pillsbury credit, he wasn't such a bad sort. However, Marjorie had never regarded him as a possible husband. There wasn't a chance that she would fall in love with him.

Discuss Affair

"Look here, Jack," Mr. Pillsbury finally said, after a few moments of silence, "is this friendship between Marjorie and that Garner boy serious?"

"They seem to be pretty fond of each other."

"I thought so. I cannot order her not to see him. That would be stupid."

Young Garner, while not possessed of the same fortune soon to come to Marjorie, was comfortably well off and at the same time in partnership with his father in an old and flourishing importing business.

This Saturday afternoon when Pillsbury and son were discussing the girl and the possibilities of having Jack marry her, Marjorie and Tom Garner were playing tennis out on the Watkins courts.

After a few sets they went down to the pool and sat on a bench. They did not notice the grace of the swans nor the beauty of the lilies in the pool, they were too much interested in their own problem.

"I ought to go to Pillsbury, Marjorie," Tom insisted.

"Not now—it will make matters worse, Tom."

"But you love me, you don't intend to let him argue you into marrying Jack, do you?"

"No. Jack's nice, but not for me—even if I hadn't fallen in love with you, Tom, I wouldn't be argued into marrying Jack."

"Mr. Pillsbury may fuss a little, but after all, dear, he represents you, legally. He is the only person I can properly ask for your hand."

Voyage Proposed

"And he won't do it. In the first place my father had so much faith in him and in the way he brought up his own two daughters that he stipulated that if I married before I was eighteen without Mr. Pillsbury's consent, I would receive only a small allowance for life."

"Suppose I got Pillsbury's consent?"

"Tom, he just won't. He loves Jack, naturally, and he is fond of me, too. Jack is fond of me and Mr. Pillsbury will never consent to you or anyone else other than Jack."

"I'm going to take Majorie on a long trip," he told his son, "it isn't true that absence makes the heart grow fonder. She'll forget about this Garner boy."

"Suppose she objects to going away, Governor?"

"She won't. It will be in the form of a finish to her education, a trip around the world."

"Great. I'll enjoy that, also."

"Anna will go with us."

Anna was Mr. Pillsbury's widowed sister who acted as head of the household for Marjorie. They got along beautifully together.

Mr. Pillsbury was right. Marjorie did not object to a three months' tour of the world. She loved travel and thus far her travels had been limited to Europe and a brief stop at Cairo.

Nor was Marjorie deceived. She knew well enough that her guardian was doing this mostly to get her away from Tom Garner.

Start on Trip

"I don't like it at all, darling," Tom explained when Marjorie told him about it.

"It's all right—I shall love the trip and it will help to kill time until we can marry."

"And you won't let them talk you into marrying Jack? It looks to me as though the trip has been cleverly planned for just that end."

"All the talk in the world won't make me change my mind, dear."

Tom Garner was happy, yet he felt uneasy, as though Marjorie might be won over in some manner. However, they had their secret parting and the day when Tom came over their parting was such as any friends might have, a shake of the hand, some exchanged "good lucks" and Tom's parting crack, "Don't bring home any sheiks or shopworn princes."

Pillsbury was encouraged. This didn't look to him as though there was any love affair between them.

Tom had Marjorie's itinerary, as the steamship company provided these. Now and then at some port of call or other, Marjorie would find a pleasant cabled message awaiting her from Tom, but so worded that the Pillsburys wouldn't be at all alarmed.

And now and then Marjorie managed to slip through a brief cabled message to Tom.

Marjorie had sailed down through the canal, away up to the tip of the Aleutian Islands and down again to Hawaii.

Pillsbury decided to change the itinerary. He shifted to another ship that would extend the trip two more months. They would take in the best of the tropic isles in that part of the Pacific.

Ma.jorie protested a little, but Pillsbury and Mrs. Thorpe explained about the beauties of all of those islands.

Before they left Honolulu Marjorie cabled again to Tom Garner, explaining everything, and added, "Don't worry."

But Tom Garner did worry. More than that, he became downright angry. He became so angry that he finally flew across the continent to San Francisco and took a fast mail liner.

He planned to head Marjorie's crowd off at Tutuila.

And so he did.

Pillsbury greeted Tom stiffly. He was secretly furious, and more so when he beheld Marjorie running into Garner's arms.

Marjorie sensed that things were all wrong with Mr. Pillsbury, Jack and Anna. When they sailed for the Dutch East Indies and Tom sailed along with them, their attitude toward him and, in a degree, toward Marjorie, changed perceptibly.

Marjorie went to her stateroom, which she occupied with Anna, and heard Mr. Pillsbury talking agitatedly with his sister. Marjorie probably would not have listened if she hadn't heard Pillsbury say: "Tomorrow is her birthday—18—you know what that means."

"But what can we do, John?" his sister asked.

"You can chaperone her in the Spanish way, be a regular duenna, never let her out of your sight for a moment until we get home or until that Garner boy leaves the ship."

"Yes, I shall have to do that. I'll be firm, believe me, John."

Tom Marries Marjorie

Marjorie sneaked away and went directly to Tom. They had a conference and then they went to the captain and had another conference.

After that, right in the captain's cabin with just the necessary witnesses, Tom and Marjorie were married!

John Pillsburg was then notified.

"You fool, Marjorie!" Pillsbury thundered at her, "you have forfeited your fortune. If you had waited until tomorrow—"

"I'm 18," Mrs. Marjorie Garner said.

"Not until tomorrow! You know that!"

"But tomorrow has already come—it came an hour ago," Tom informed Pillsbury.

"That is quite true, sir," the captain explained, "you see we have just crossed the international date line. An hour ago it was Tuesday, now it is Wednesday!"

"It—it—it isn't sense—it isn't legal!" Pillsbury protested.

But it was and he was forced to admit it.

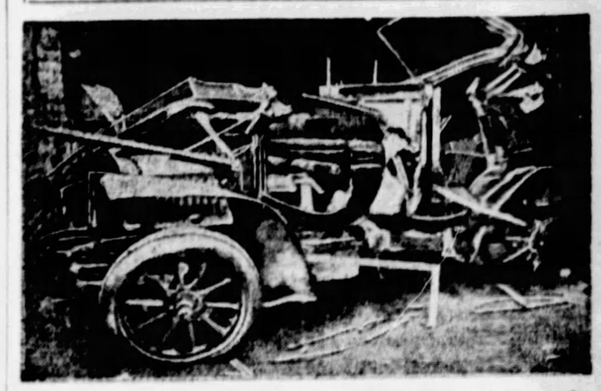
"Paul Revere" Frisby to Repay Debt to the People



WASHINGTON, April 24.—Congressman Horace Frisby made history today. Removing his shoes to make speed, he ran down Pennsylvania avenue in his stocking feet. Sirens shrieked and thousands cheered as the breathless congressman flung his printed proclamation right and left, explaining his plan to give everybody in America an automobile absolutely free. "Of course," Frisby explained later, "these free autos will be used cars. All I ask, in return, is that the people bring the cars to me exclusively for repairs. I plan to open a string of garages from coast to coast." Above picture shows the first auto Mr. Frisby hopes to give away. He will offer it to President Hoover.

Improvement Projects Get Under Way With Awarding of Contracts, Including One for High School Building

The Board of Public Education got its summer program of school improvement under way by awarding contracts this week amounting to $605,145, the largest single item being $447,180 for the new Prospect High and Elementary School, Mt. Washington. Other new projects under consideration by the board are an addition to the Westinghouse High School, new Mifflin School and the William M. Davidson High School, to be erected in West Liberty avenue. Besides adding to the efficient plant of our splendid school system, these projects will prove a considerable boon to labor.

Beginning tomorrow Pittsburgh will conduct its affairs on daylight-saving time. The change takes place at 2 o'clock in the morning, but most people will set their timepieces ahead one hour before retiring tonight. Some folks object to "monkeying" with the clocks, as they call it. They say we are fooling ourselves, and that the same result would be accomplished if we just got up an hour earlier, lunch at 11 instead of 12 and quit work at 4 instead of 5. However, proof of the pudding is in the eating, and most folks seem to like the daylight-saving plan.

It was reassuring to be told, as we were told by Maj. Hollis Leroy Muller, instructor of Coast Artillery Reserves, the other day, that we could stand off an aircraft attack here, with sufficient defense. That, he said, would be 48 modern anti-aircraft guns, about 450 machine guns and 48 searchlights. Perhaps we shall have the nucleus for such a service within the local National Guard in a few years.

An important convention now in session here is the tenth annual meeting of the Catholic Educational Association, with more than 1,200 delegates from various parts of the state. In both religious and secular education Pittsburgh is prominent in the educational work of Catholics, having Duquesne University, several academies and high schools and numerous excellent parochial elementary schools. That means a lot in our general educational scheme.

"Hospitality Days" officially included only Friday and Saturday, but we can assure our visitors that remaining another day would prove profitable. For those who choose to do so, we add another instruction to the list prepared for the guidance of those temporarily with us—See our churches. There are many beautiful edifices here, but most beautiful of all is the Christian spirit of welcome for the stranger that prevails within them. Stay another day, attend church, visit or revisit the parks.

First guns are being fired in the battle for ballots in the fall. District Attorney Andrew T. Park formally announced his candidacy to succeed himself at a dinner in which his conduct of his office was lauded by members of bench and bar. Another dinner, largely attended by politicians, was interpreted as a "boom" event in behalf of John Cavanaugh, of Homestead, for County Commissioner, an office that has been pretty well monopolized by Pittsburgh in recent years. Other guns may be expected to boom shortly. Everybody but the voter prepares.

Prosperity note: The American Bridge Company, at its Ambridge yards, has launched the first of an order for 10 all-steel barges to be built for the Inland Waterways Commission. Others are expected to be launched at intervals of 20 days until the order is completed. They are 300 feet in length, 48 feet wide and 11 feet in depth. That means a lot of steel and a lot of labor.

The new Clifford B. Connelley Trade School, part of the public school system, Bedford avenue and Fullerton street, will be dedicated next Friday afternoon, it is announced. Addresses will be by I. Lamont Hughes, president of the Carnegie Steel Company, and Philip Murray, member of the Board of Public Education and international vice president of the United Mine Workers. The choice of speakers appears to be especially appropriate for the dedication of a trade school.

Quick-thinking in an emergency always evokes admiration. So you will doff your hat, please, to Constable John H. Muirhead, of Mt. Lebanon. He saw a man he had been "after" for months. But he didn't have his warrant. So he picked a quarrel with his quarry. Both were arrested, but the constable was released, while the other was held on a bad-check charge. "Get your man," is the slogan of every good officer.

With the local baseball season finally opened with official eclat, after two days' delay because of weather more suitable for snowballing than baseballing, one assumes that it is safe to say that the Pirates are again among friends. They'll be loyal friends, too, as long as the Buccaneer weapons are so potent in the base-hit line that their contests are registered in the games-won column. The fan is an unselfish person—all he asks of his team is victory.

Reflection of the acute state of unemployment is contained in the declaration that Welfare Fund member agencies have exceeded their budgets and have been drawing so heavily from the reserve fund that the campaign for next year may require taking care of a deficit as well as providing money for another year's work. A committee will investigate to see if there is any overlapping work among the agencies. Every day's employment given now will relieve the pressure on the fund.

Revelation that legislation is needed to insure that railways be maintained in a safe condition, developed as a result of investigation relative to the abandonment of the Butler short Line this week, is disturbing. It appears that recommendations made by inspectors of the Public Service Commission relative to the condition of such carriers are optional with the operators, as regards their fulfillment. If legislation be needed for the safety of passengers, it should be attended to promptly.

It should be a matter of pride locally that a Pitts- burgh Girl Scout, daughter of Congressman Erk, was among those so well trained in home economics that they were able to serve President and Mrs. Hoover and others in Washington an excellent meal that cost less than 24 cents a plate. It is a fine tribute to the girls that their domestic demonstration received nation-wide publicity.

Spring Moon-ings

There are nights in the life of every man that he will never forget: The night when he met The Girl, the first night he kissed her, the first night in Venice, lots of nights in Paris — and the night when he left his wallet with the tickets in his other clothes.

There are times when a husband has such sublime faith in his wife's immunity to flattery or romance that it is almost an insult to her vanity.

The thing that most plagues and astonishes a man about a woman is the discovery that she expects him to "win" her all over again, every day.

* * *

The old-fashioned girl looked forward to a husband as a "harbor;" nowadays, most husbands look as though the girl had decided on "any port in a storm."

Before marriage, a man keeps a woman's photograph on his desk as an inspiration—after marriage, he keeps it there as a stop-signal.

It's a feat to persuade a husband to learn to dance; but it's wonderful how quickly he can pick up all the new steps after his wife goes to Reno.

The test of a man's strength of character is his ability to drive the car under a spring moon, and hold onto a woman with one arm and onto the wheel and his freedom with the other.

This is that dangerous time of the year when a man is almost afraid to pretend that he is in love for fear he may take himself seriously.

THE SUN'S POWER

By Archibald Henderson

As we walk out in the sunshine and feel the genial glow of the sun, we little reck of the enormous force of solar radiation ever at work throughout the universe. Light itself exerts a pressure which can be measured. Theoretically, as Eddington says, it would be possible to knock a man over by turning a searchlight on him—only the searchlight would have to be excessively intense, and the man would probably be vaporized first!

One of the fundamental relations advanced by Einstein in his special theory of Relativity is that between mass and energy. The enormous amount of potential energy in matter is evidenced by this formula, according to which the effective mass must be multiplied by the square of the velocity of light. And this velocity of light, according to Prof. Albert Michelson's latest determination, is 186,213 miles per second.

Consider now the state of affairs inside the sun. Electrons and protons fall into one another and destroy one another, with a high energy of fall. The velocity of an ordinary molecule of air inside of a room at normal temperature is 1,500 feet a second. Whereas, inside the sun, a molecule of matter darts about at the rate of more than 500,000 feet per second.

As Darrow points out in his stimulating work, "The New World of Physical Discovery," we measure sunlight not only in degrees of temperature, but also in terms of periods of weight. Sixty tons of the sun's mass are dissipated each year for the benefit of the earth and its inhabitants alone. The only thing which stands between the human being upon this earth and death by freezing is this fortunate gift of 60 tons of sunlight annually.

Let us go a little more closely into this phenomenon. Every year, on the basis of the new theory of the annihilation of matter, the sun loses 125,000,000,000 tons. The resulting energy radiates out from the sun into spaces in all directions and the earth catches only one two-billionths of it, or as we have seen, 60 tons. On this basis the sun has a lease on life of at least 15,000,000,000 years still. So, at the moment, there is no cause for grave alarm.

To keep us going, we only have for the entire earth less than 4 ounces per minute. Translate this, however, into terms of energy, according to Einstein's formula and it figures up to the astounding total of 235,000,000,000,000 foot pounds of energy per minute. In other words to 10,000,000 Niagara's! This is 45 times as much energy as is used in the whole world for all mechanical power purposes whatsoever.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 25.—Here I am flirting with 50 and have never been bothered by gnats until today. Of course, I've seen them around, but outside of a possible quick nod in passing we have never been chummy. They have just been a lot of insects to me. I know too many insects already.

It all began when I opened the window and sat down at my typewriter. A flock of them seemed to think I had opened up a new street, wheeled about and came right in. At first I thought they were spots before the eyes. The kidney pill ad. influence!

Then two of them left the gang and landed on my typewriter paper. At first they just sat there, preened their wings, and then got together for what looked like an exhibition schottische. Come to think, it was a little vulgar for a schottische.

The rest headed for the pantry where I keep jellies, the supply of which is getting pretty low. And it looks like a tough winter ahead. Finally the dancing pair joined them and I thought I was free of gnats until I finished my chore.

But in a few minutes one came back. My impression is that he had just horned in on the gang and didn't belong—the peasant type. He didn't fly but sort of hopped about. I'm not mentioning names but I have a suspicion his pappy was a flea.

He hopped from an ash tray to a desk calendar, then to the letter G on my typewriter and from there to the edge of my inkwell. He must have lost his footing there and fallen in. At any rate I didn't see him again. Remind me to tell you sometime about the cockroach and the bottle of ink.

* * *

About this time Ray Long dropped in with another one of his Russian authors—a waxy-faced fellow with a full bright beard. After introductions and cigarets had been lighted, the whole troupe came buzzing back. Aside from never having any luck with company, you know how gnats are. I expected any moment for the cheerleader to give a high sign and the whole gang zoom for the Russian's beard. His was that sort of foliage. It wouldn't have surprised you much if a meadow lark popped out.

* * *

I don't believe these were city gnats. They acted to me like a bunch of country jakes—snooping around like. I have the idea they just came over from some place like Redbank, N. J., for the day. I'll know better tomorrow. Wherever they come from they have got to understand we have no room around this hour for anything else. And if any relatives have their feelings hurt reading that it is just too bad and will they please take a running jump into the canal?

* * *

Another visitor during the day—the gnat motif in literature—was Charlie Driscoll. I rather hoped the gnats would swarm on him just to see his reaction. Or as we Freudians say, to see if he was gnat conscious. For a time the bull gnat circled around and I thought he would yell "Come on boys!" but instead he seemed to get another sniff of the kitchen and away he went—the gang in hot pursuit. The kitchen seems to to be the most attractive room in the house to gnats. As a matter of fact they were suckers, for had they gone into the parlor there was a platter of fudge. Also a dish of candied fruits—all exposed and everything.

Gnats propagate rapidly. I am told they are frequently grandparents over night. I suppose it's downright onery, but I'd like to slip two—it would just about hold a pair—into Paul Whiteman's mustache just as he falls asleep. And have him wake up with his pillow swarming.

* * *

So far as I can judge from a hurried inspection of gnats they are just runt flies. The bull gnat, or leader, in buzzing around somehow to me suggested in miniature Paul McCullough, except he was a brunette. And several of the younger ones were the spit image of Lester Allen

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

Do you respect your own gray hairs as well as the gray hairs of others?

In your words and general deportment do you represent good judgment, general common sense which gray hair ought to indicate?

You may wish to appear young—as prematurely gray.

Then you carry to excess the thought that a man is only as old as he feels.

In many ways you are as irresponsible as those half your age.

You choose companions much younger and try to imitate their ways.

With your silver top it makes you appear ridiculous.

You don't like the sedate manner of those of your own age and you will not apply your mentality in discussions of subjects that an older person should talk about.

You want the younger generation to call you a "good old sport."

But this is about as far as they would recommend you, no doubt.

They realize that with advancing years you have ceased to grow wise.

You are not paying due respect to your own gray hair, and so you have not attained the position of dignity and respect that should be yours among your associates, young or old.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Singing Waters

So steep and rugged is the slope
So rough the narrow trail
As to the crest I slowly grope
It seems my strength must fail.
These hills, forbidding, barren bleak,
House naught of promise here
For which a wanderer might seek
To lend fresh hope and cheer.

There is a dearth, no flower or bird
To flaunt its loveliness.
Yet faintly now the air is stirred
By sound like a caress.
It trembles on the listening ear
And makes the heart rejoice.
So little, yet so sweet and clear,
The singing waters' voice.

Hope wakes once more, one glad refrain
Has rung from far below;
The lagging spirit soars again
When singing waters flow.

Wanted, a Backbone

Government Takes Different View in Nicaraguan Situation Than Roosevelt Did in Similar Case.

CITIZENS of all nations feel that their governments, to the extent of their powers, should protect citizens, wherever they may be.

No question is ever raised about that concerning citizens of the British EMPIRE.

When a Britisher travels "on his lawful occasions" to spread British commerce or industry anywhere on earth, THE BRITISH FLAG GOES WITH HIM AND THE BRITISH ARMY AND NAVY ARE BACK OF THAT FLAG. The flag and the power of Britain do not go with British citizens SOME TIMES and leave him in the lurch SOME TIMES.

It is on the spot ALWAYS.

We cannot, unfortunately, say as much, just now, of the United States, and the flag that represents the United States.

AMERICANS read the announcement that our citizens who have made investments in the interior of Nicaragua, building up business for Nicaraguans as well as for American businessmen, creating work and payrolls for Nicaraguans, must RELY ON THEMSELVES.

A Nicaraguan person named Sandino, declared by President Hoover to be only a bandit "outside the pale of civilization," made up his mind to kill a few Americans, and did—marines and civilians.

Many American citizens feel that the correct way to acknowledge that performance would have been to "get" Mr. Sandino, and dispose of him.

But this government, through its Secretary of State, Mr. Stimson, takes a different view of the situation. The United States says officially:

"CITIZENS IN THE INTERIOR OF NICARAGUA MUST LOOK AFTER THEMSELVES. Their government will not be responsible for them. American ships are on the coast. Americans that succeed in running away and getting to those ships will be protected, if possible. Otherwise, they must look out for themselves."

THAT presumably is intended as a tribute to the well-known and beautiful text: "Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other cheek."

In international matters, cheek-turning, in the opinion of many, can be overdone.

Some prefer the method of the late Theodore Roosevelt. When he was President of the United States, Raisuli, bandit of the Sandino type, located in Northern Africa, seized an American citizen named Perdicaris, a man not born in this country, but AN AMERICAN CITIZEN.

The American government, having made him a citizen, did not disclaim responsibility, or refuse to take an interest in him.

Theodore Roosevelt put it in a few words:

"PERDICARIS ALIVE, OR RAISULI DEAD."

Raisuli evidently had heard about Theodore Roosevelt.

He promptly produced Perdicaris ALIVE and thus saved his own skin.

SOME observations by Hiram Johnson, California Senator, are recommended to reader's attention. At least 99½ per cent will agree with what Senator Johnson says:

"Last January, just after the killing of 10 or 12 of our marines, I introduced, and the Senate passed, a resolution calling upon the Secretary of State for information concerning the situation in Nicaragua.

"I remarked then that the United States should pursue one of two courses. Either withdraw the marines entirely or send enough there to do the job. The administration has done neither.

"We now invite assassination of innocent Americans and others by Nicaraguan bandits and take the humiliating position of saying we cannot protect the lives of our citizens.

"I would not say that if we devoted less time to sending hosts of people through our country to preach our going into Europe by one means or another we might have more time to devote to American interests and safeguarding American lives, but I would very humbly suggest that now we are permitted, by the grace of a foreign country, to build a navy upon specifications provided for us abroad, we might give a little, just a very little, time to thought of our own upon this continent.

"I cannot help recalling Theodore Roosevelt's ultimatum when Perdicaris, an American citizen, was captured by the bandit, Raisuli—'Give me Perdicaris alive or Raisuli dead'—and the American citizen was forthwith released and delivered alive.

"But this was in the now unfashionable time when our first thought was America for Americans."

Thus speaks Hiram W. Johnson, Senator from California, who retains the primitive notion that the business and duty of government is to protect its citizens to the extent of its power, no matter how far they may be from Washington, D. C., or Wall street, New York.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Wreaths—big, juicy, green ones—for Joseph Marr Gwinn, superintendent of San Francisco schools, for he has said a large earful of Sound Sense.

"LEARNING TO GET ALONG WITH OTHER PEOPLE," says Mr. Gwinn, "IS MORE IMPORTANT IN LIFE THAN LEARNING THE MULTIPLICATION TABLES."

Didn't need a school superintendent to tell you that, did you? But what a miracle to find one with the wit to realize it. Long ago you discovered that, from the day you opened your eyes until the day you close them, your main job would be just Getting Along With Other People.

Good deal of a surprise at first, wasn't it? You had things sized up differently. You started out with the firm belief that success would depend upon the knowledge and skill you would amass and attain. You bent all your energies to developing your talents—to selecting certain High Aims and Important Projects which would set your name in the bright lights. And you, thereupon, proceeded to Go Get 'Em. Which surely would not be difficult if you were honest, industrious, thrifty, efficient, studious, alert, bought your collars at Jones', your hat at Snoobs' and avoided halitosis. As per all our best ads and copybook maxims.

But a shock awaited you! Despite all your flossy technique, so painfully acquired at the expense of the taxpayers, you found that, between you and your goal stood several million other humans, all of whom were more or less of a pain in the neck. And your career would flourish or flop according to your ability to get along with these ornery millions.

Nor was "getting along" a simple matter of kissing them off. It implied all sorts of adroit manipulation — frankness for one man, subtlety for the other ... open-handed generosity with one type, a calculating eye and a closed fist for the other. It demanded an ability to Pick 'Em. And an even greater ability to Leave 'Em Alone. Beside these qualifications, all your facts and statistics and technical tips faded into insignificance.

YET THESE WERE PRECISELY THE THINGS THEY HAD NOT TAUGHT YOU IN SCHOOL. INSTEAD, YOU HAD BEEN TAUGHT TO PIN YOUR FAITH TO ACADEMIC FACTS AND ATTITUDES ... TO THOSE "MULTIPLICATION TABLES" WHICH JOSEPH GWINN HAS AT LAST HAD THE SPUNK TO PUT IN THEIR PROPER PLACE.

With what result? With the result that a lot of glad-handing roughnecks, who'd never gone beyond the sixth grade, grabbed up all the choice things in the market while you were trying to decide which formula to use first.

Some day when we have real schools, that's what we'll teach, from kindergarten, through college—THE GENTLE, AND NOT SO GENTLE, ART OF GETTING ALONG WITH YOUR FELLOW MAN. After that maybe we'll bone up on English Lit. and Math.

And in the meantime, while we're waiting—wreaths for Joseph Gwinn! That person knows his human race.
